

Conference for Halton women seeking work

Unemployed? Looking for work? Want to learn new skills?

It can seem overwhelming, especially if you've been out of the job market for some time. Find out where to begin at Options: The Conference that Works for Women.

This two-day conference will be held next Tuesday and May 31 at the Holiday Inn, 3063 South Service Rd., in Burlington from 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

Building on the success from last year's conference, Halton women will learn about job prospects for the future, local training programs, resources available in the community and tips for balancing work and family. Working in small groups, participants will also spend time identifying personal skills, strengths and interests to help find the type of job that suits each person.

The conference is open to Halton women at no charge. Assistance with transportation to the conference is available. Participants must pre-register by calling (905) 825-6000, ext. 4170.

Be sure to read about all the local arts and entertainment happenings in this Friday's Champion. A&E appears every other Friday.

Student finalist in contest

Milton District High School student Tenille Lou-Hing was one of three winners chosen for the Intergenerational Essay Contest.

The contest, sponsored by the Halton chapter of Canada's Association for the Fifty-Plus (CARP), was open to all secondary students in Halton.

Each school was requested to submit its best entry to the chapter.

The winners will be announced at the group's meeting tomorrow night. Prizes of $300, $200 and $100 will be awarded.

The students will also have the opportunity to read or tell of their intergenerational experiences.

Jonathan Tien of St. Ignatius of Loyola Secondary School in Oakville and Katharine Wallace of Assumption Secondary School in Burlington will also be recognized at the meeting.

Members and the general public are welcome to attend. For more information, call Harry Bowers at (905) 335-5717.
