One day they're in diapers, the next day they're out the door

• from DO YOU on page 14
than me, so I'm guessing all of the sudden he's going to want to be my buddy. And I'm going to want to be his. Hmm... I wonder if that's how it starts. You know, those stories of the old ladies with 53 cats.

I haven't been allowed to mention my daughter leaving for the last month or so because I would get too emotional. Finally, she said enough was enough. I was a basket case when my first daughter left, so this was going to be just as bad.

I got a little revenge when I dropped my daughter off at the place she will be staying and she ended up being more emotional than I was. That'll teach her.

Of course we want our kids to make their way in the world and we know the day is going to come eventually, but it's just that it happens sooner than we could imagine. One day they're in diapers, the next day they're out the door.

So, I bet there are a lot of unhappy parents this week. Don't worry, it's less than three months until Christmas.
