

School bus safety vital for drivers

Now that the new school year has started, Halton Regional Police want to remind local motorists to take care when driving around and past school buses as well as intersections monitored by school crossing guards.

"The safety of our children is the community's priority," said Halton police spokesperson Sgt. Val Hay.

As part of the reminder, here are a few of the traffic rules regarding school buses and crossings set out in the Ontario Highway Traffic Act.

- Every driver, either approaching from the front or the rear of a school bus, who sees the school bus has the overhead red signal lights activated, must stop at least 20 metres before reaching the bus and must not proceed until the bus moves or the lights go out.

- When a school crossing guard has a school crossing stop sign displayed directing movement of children across a street, the driver of a vehicle approaching the sign from any direction must stop before reaching the crossing.

There are substantial penalties related to traffic violations involving school buses in Ontario.

Upon conviction, fines start at $400 (plus a $95 victim surcharge) but can be ordered as high as $2,000 for a first-time conviction.
