

Well-known, active citizen Dilys Joss will be missed

Milton lost a well-known and active member of the community November 5, when Dilys Joss died suddenly at her home.

Ms Joss' involvement in community activities spanned several decades. She helped establish a nursery school in Campbellville, drove for the Halton Children's Aid Society, collected annually for the Cancer Society, and was a regular volunteer at the Milton Public Library.

She was also actively involved with St. Paul's United Church — caring for children at Mothers' Group meetings and as a member of the Outreach Committee with Amnesty International. Ms Joss is survived by her husband Don and children David, Dean, Douglas and Gleny.

A memorial service was held last Friday at St. Paul's United Church.

Intergenerational contest by CARP

The Halton chapter of Canada's Association for the Fifty Plus has launched its third annual Intergenerational Contest.

Secondary school students from across Halton are invited to write an essay relating to their experience or conversations they have had with their grandparents or other mature persons.

Each school will choose an essay to represent them in the contest. Entries must be submitted by March 31. First, second and third prize will receive $300, $200 and $100 respectively.

New HMC head

The Halton Multicultural Council (HMC) has announced three-year staffer Sophia Makridis has been named acting managing director.

Ms Makridis will hold the position for one year while Managing Director Frances Cordero do Bolanos is seconded to the Ministry of Canadian Heritage as program officer.

With HMC, she has been a youth worker and English teacher.

CNIB has new board

The Canadian National Institute for the Blind (CNIB) Halton/Peel has formed its 2001-02 District Board.

Board members include Keith Franks, a member of CNIB Speaker's Bureau, Joseph Marquis, teacher of the visually impaired for the Dufferin-Peel Catholic District School Board, Robert Emond, occupational health and safety specialist (retired), Hans Bueschleb, electrician (retired), Ed Gamrot of Corpinance International Ltd. and David Stiles of Walsh Medical Devices Inc.

The board looks forward to a challenging year and is working on plans to enhance and develop services for people who are blind, visually impaired, or deaf and blind in the Halton and Peel communities.
