Be predictable, but nice on Feb. 14

• from HERE'S SOME on page 16

Chocolates are stupid, or maybe not. Virtually all women are on diets, or say they are, so you could get to eat the chocolates yourself. Not a bad idea.

I've never understood jewelry, but women like it for some reason. I think if you get something engraved it shows that you have put some thought and effort into it. Flowers become very expensive this time of year, but they're still a good investment. If you do get them, send them to your lady's workplace instead of giving them to her at home. It's like a double present, because it's a surprise and they can show them off to their workmates.

I caution against trying to pull off Valentine's surprises, because then you have to do it every year and eventually it gets out of control. The next thing you know, you're going on some hot air balloon ride over the countryside that costs you an arm and a leg. Be predictable, but nice. You could go out to dinner on Valentine's Day, but the line-ups are way too long, and it will take forever to get your Big Mac. Staying home is your best bet. My idea of a romantic evening is watching football or hockey with a bowl of popcorn. This isn't the same idea that women have, however, which illustrates why I live alone. You should turn off the lights, put on some candles, and rent The English Patient. It will be difficult, but you will have to stay awake until the movie is over.

Good luck and remember to follow my tips. Just to be on the safe side, though, keep a blanket and pillow handy for the couch.
