Program teaches kids the value of staying in school

Grade 8 students at Holy Rosary School recently received a reality check on the role that staying in school plays in determining their career options and future lifestyles.

On April 23, Junior Achievement of Halton presented its Economics of Staying in School (ESIS) program as part of a one-day blitz throughout Halton, Peel, Toronto and Durham regions.

TD Bank Financial Group sponsored and provided volunteers for programs that reached thousands of students.

"ESIS is an extremely interactive program that uses a game of success to give students a look at the impact that decisions about staying in school can have on their future," said Sue Suess, president of Junior Achievement of Halton. "As adults, we know that the level of schooling students reach will have a strong impact on their future choices and lifestyles, but at grade eight, many students can't appreciate that."

Junior Achievement of Halton programs are funded by businesses such as TD Bank and are presented free to schools by business volunteers who bring their experience to the class.

Junior Achievement also provides programs introducing business and economic concepts to students from grades 5 to 7 and offers high school students an after-school program that allows them to set up and run their own businesses.
