'Milton Watch' program to be launched tomorrow at the Farmers' Market

By STEPHANIE THIESSEN

The Champion

Criminals better watch out because starting tomorrow, Milton has a new way of combating theft and other illegal activities.

And you're a part of it.

The program is called Milton Watch, and it isn't complicated. Milton residents are asked to simply keep their eyes and ears open for any suspicious or unusual activity in their neighbourhoods. If something comes up, they're asked to call Milton police or Crime Stoppers. All calls will be treated anonymously.

The program has been developed by the Milton Community Consultation Committee, a group that brings together citizens, police and community leaders in a monthly discussion forum.

Sandy Martin, executive director of the Milton Chamber of Commerce and a member of the Milton Community Consultation Committee, said she thinks the idea is "wonderful."

"It's an opportunity for residents to make a difference in their community. They're asked to pay attention to their neighbourhoods and get involved," she said, adding that it's a looser program than Neighbourhood Watch.

Of course, knowing what's normal in the neighbourhood and what isn't will require Miltonians to get to know their neighbours better, said Ms Martin — a side benefit of the program.

Some of the things Milton Watch participants should watch out for are: somebody screaming, someone looking into building windows or parked cars, unusual noises, vehicles moving slowly with no apparent destination and property being taken out of houses or businesses when nobody is home or the businesses are closed.

Some people hesitate calling police to report unusual activities because they worry they might be wrong. They shouldn't, said Ms Martin, and the program is designed to put these worries to rest.

"Police want information from the outset rather than having to react to crime. No call is deemed unimportant," she said. "Most people think if it's not an emergency, it's not relevant. We want to make it clear that it is relevant."

She added that if it's a crime that's being reported, 911 is still the number to call.

A Milton Watch newsletter will be distributed two or three times each year, which will include timely tips on safety and property protection. The first newsletters — which describe the program in more detail — will be distributed tomorrow during the program's launch at the Farmers' Market.

Ms Martin stressed that Halton continues to be "one of the safest communities in Canada," but added that "Milton has its share of traffic violations, and crime does take place. If we pay attention, we can nip it in the bud."

Ms Martin said she's optimistic the program will result in fewer crimes, particularly crimes of property. And she hopes the simplicity of the program will appeal to Miltonians. "It's as simple as getting the information and being a good neighbour."
