

Jr. Red Sox continue to be plagued by spring rainouts

Milton's baseball juniors will no doubt face some stiff challenges in their bid to retain both league and provincial championship titles.

But these days, Mother Nature has been the greatest adversary for the Red Sox — who've already been hit with three rain-outs. The latest was Saturday afternoon, when a still soaked Brian Best Park — drenched during last Friday's downpour — put the kibosh on home-opening play against the Guelph Royals.

Further adding to an inactive spring, the Mississauga North Bengals postponed their Sunday afternoon trip to Milton, since long-weekend absences left them unable to field a full squad.

"It's been ridiculous — just a horrible start, or non-start, to the season," said frustrated manager Glenn Turner, whose Red Sox have played just one of five potential games to this point, due to three rain-outs and Mississauga North's cancellation.

Should make-up games continue to pile up, Milton could have an awfully hectic second half of the season. Added Turner, "We've got to be done by mid-July, so that could make for a really jam-packed schedule near the end. Last May we played eight games, but this year we'll be lucky to get in two or three."

The 0-1 Red Sox have gotten one piece of good news recently — learning that crafty pitcher Ian Moszczak will be back this week from New York's Mohawk University. The veteran hurler has enjoyed an exceptional spring in the NCAA and should help anchor the defending champs — at least once they actually start getting in some games.

Milton will look to square its record tomorrow at Brian Best Park against Georgetown — whose on-again, off-again return to junior league play is now apparently on-again. Game time is 6 p.m.
