

Hadfield featured on stamp

"When I grow up, I want to be an astronaut."

These words are spoken by almost every child at one time or another.

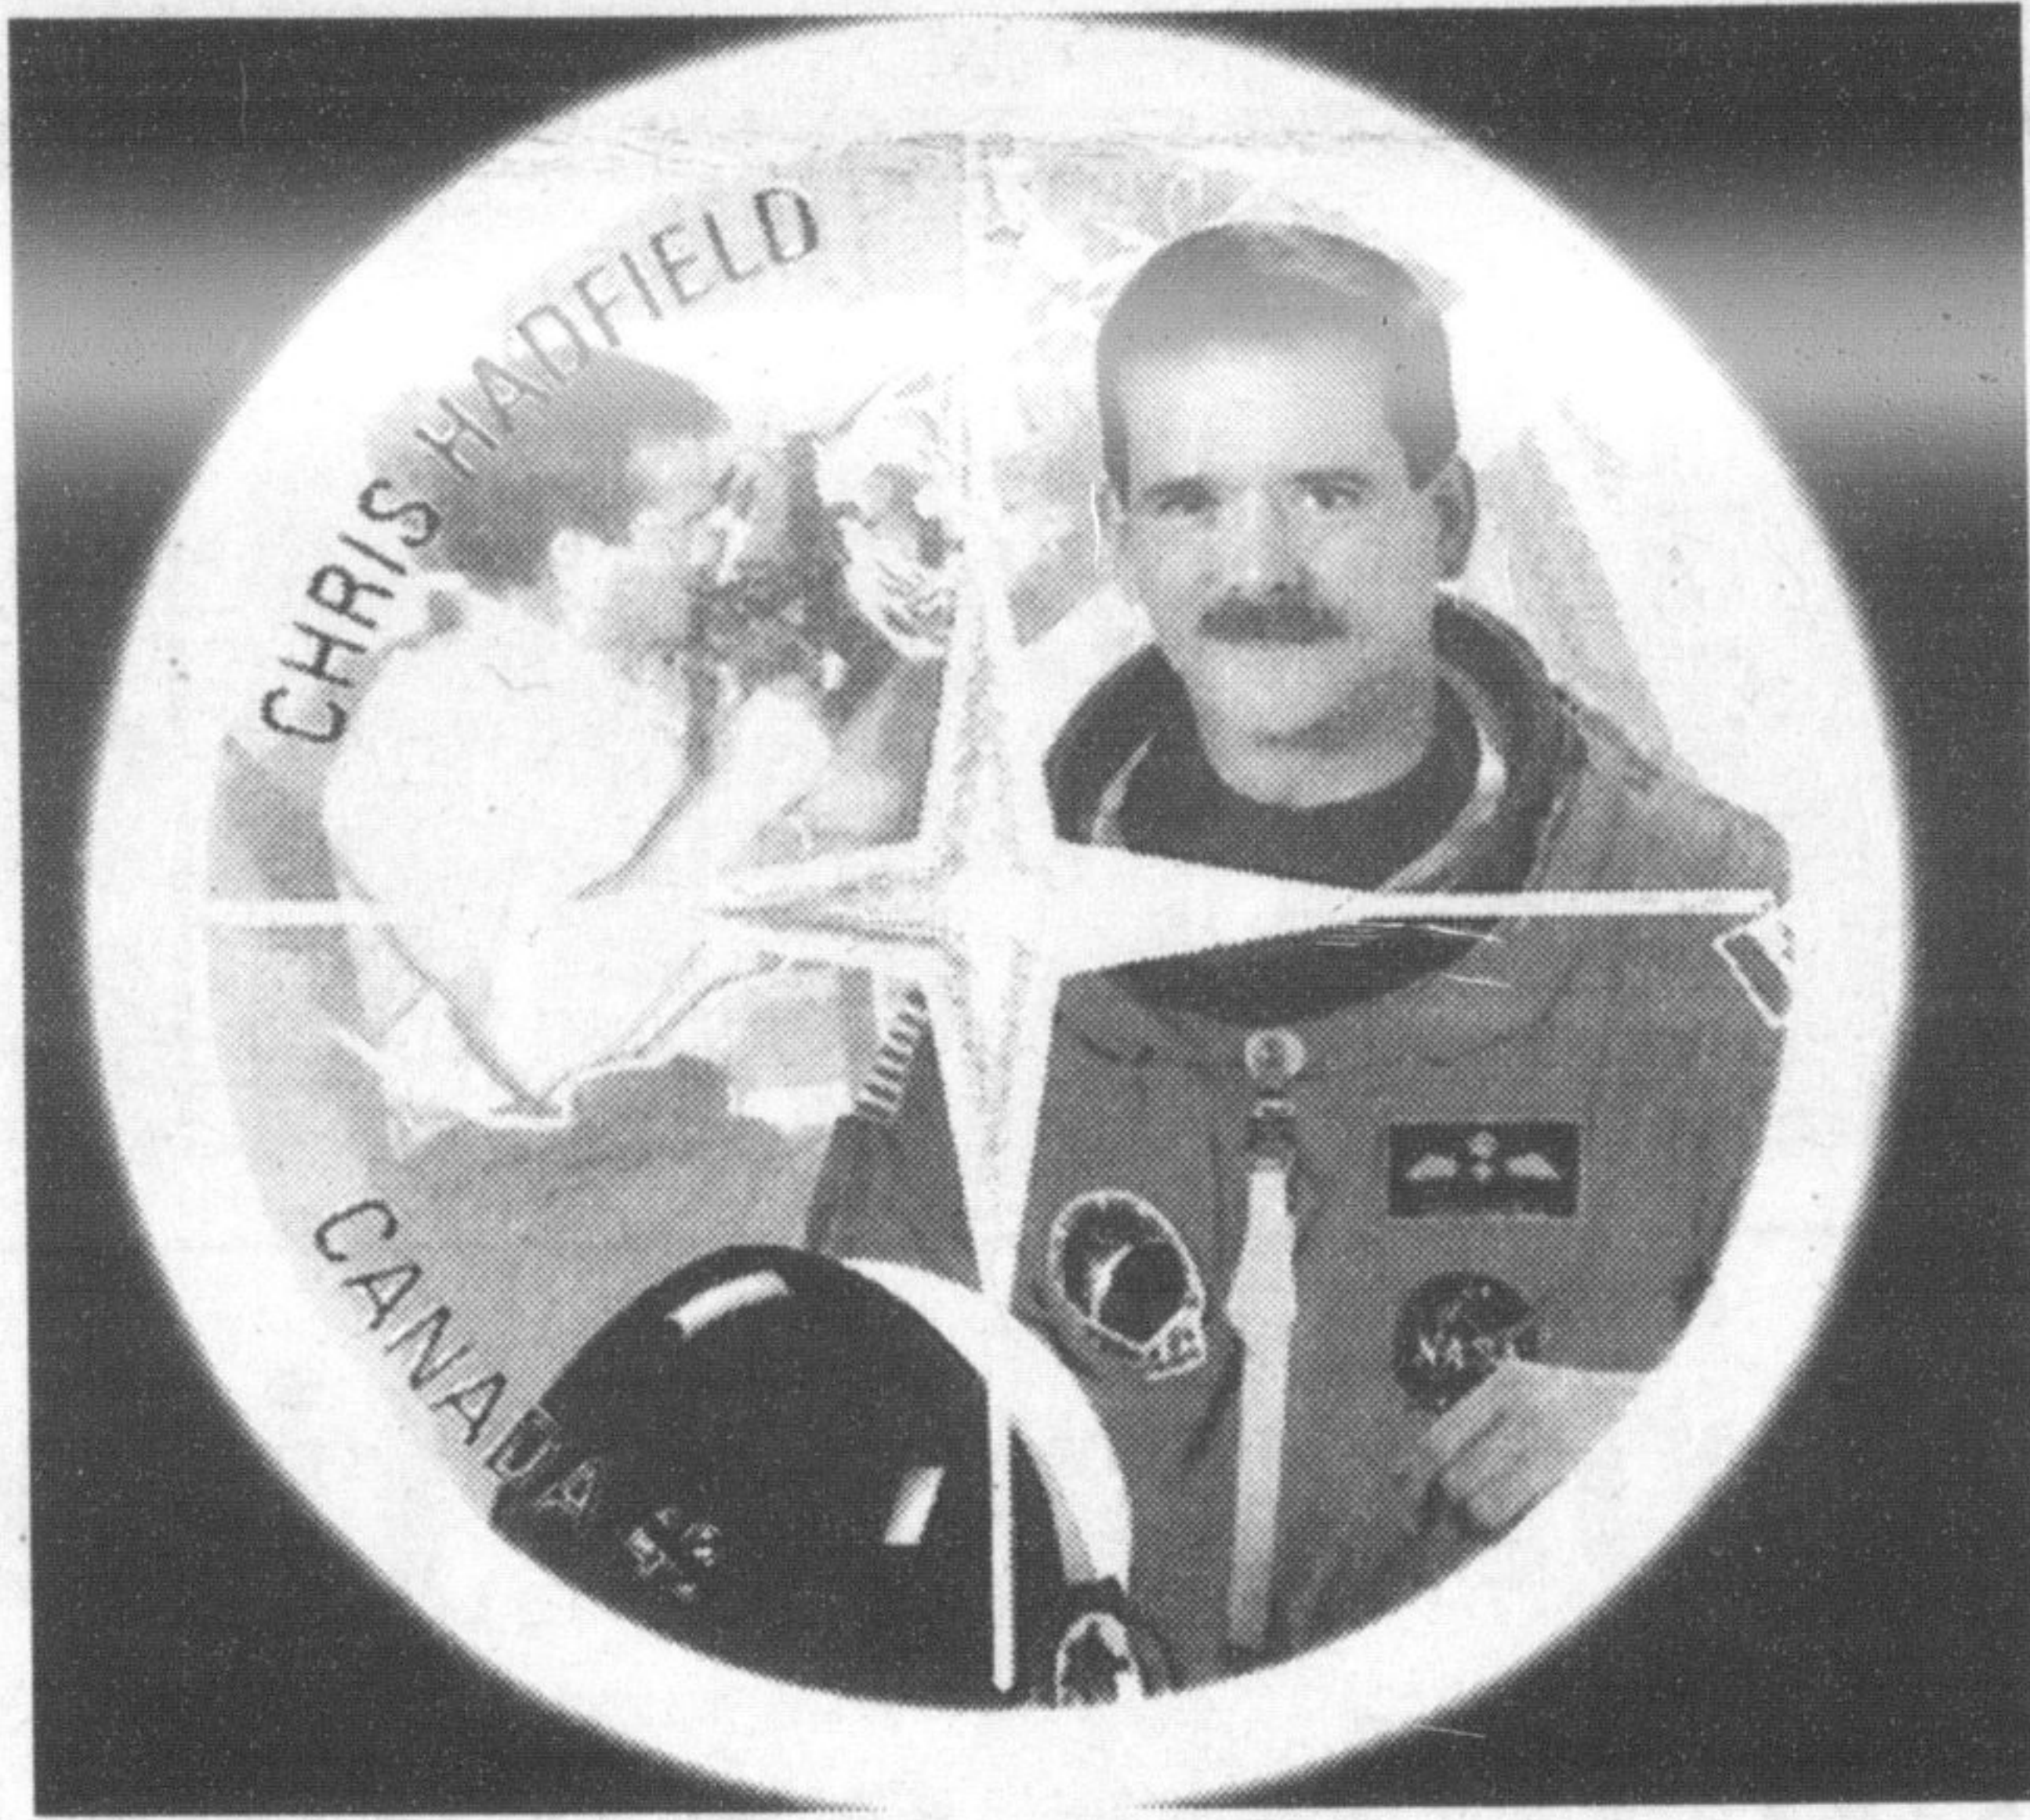

New postage stamps issued this month by Canada Post will allow Canadians of all ages to share in the excitement of one of the country's most admired organizations.

These stamps celebrate Canadian astronauts, the Canadian Space Agency and decades of Canadian achievements and presence in space.

Each of the eight stamps features a Canadian astronaut who has spent time in space, including Chris Hadfield who grew up in Milton. He became the first Canadian to perform a spacewalk in 2001 during the installation of Canadarm2 on the International Space Station.

Six million of these stamps were issued October 1, coinciding with October is Stamp Collecting Month.

Stamps are available at participating post offices or can be ordered on-line at www.canadapost.ca, or by calling 1-800-565-4362.

Correction

An article in the October 21 issue of The Champion about former boxer George Chuvalo's visit to Milton District High School stated incorrectly that his son Jesse died from a drug overdose.

Actually, he shot himself.

The Champion apologizes for the error and any inconvenience it may have caused.
