Committee to assess user-fee garbage system

By JASON MISNER
The Champion

You won't have to slap a pre-paid ticket on your garbage bags, but a user-fee system isn't off the table.

A staff report on a pay-per-garbage-bag system was before Halton's planning and public works committee meeting Wednesday following a request from a regional councillor last fall as a means to diverting more waste from Halton's lone landfill on Regional Road 25 in Milton.

The report recommended spending $40,000 to retain a consultant to gather public feedback about a user-pay system. Currently garbage pick-up costs are paid for entirely through property taxes.

The report stated 200 Canadian municipalities — big and small — have user-pay and typically charge $1 to $5 per bag. Some have set bag limits.

User fees are generally used, the report noted, to encourage waste diversion rather than recovering the full costs of garbage collection.

The report, however, didn't provide the costs of how the system would actually operate in Halton. But it noted there are critical challenges to be considered with user-pay including enforcement, convenience, how industries would be charged and the impact on the Region's waste collection contract set to expire in 2008.

The committee's consensus was it's premature to ask people their opinion about a change in garbage collection when they don't have any numbers in front of them. They felt it would be better to have the Region's waste review committee assess the merits of a pay-per-bag system and to report back later with potential recommendations about a pay-per-bag system.

The committee, comprised of staff, politicians and members of the public, will have its first meeting next month as the Region begins a five-year review of its waste management strategy, starting this year and finishing possibly by next spring.

The public can access the committee to provide comments.

"I think it's a broader and integrated view with what we're doing in waste management and I think that's the appropriate place to deal with this issue," said Mike Wallace, Burlington regional councillor and committee chair.

Regional staff will work to compile a financial analysis for the waste review committee, Rob Rivers, Halton's director of waste management, said after the meeting.

The financial report will determine the impact on taxes with the introduction of user fees.

Milton rural resident Bob Beyette told the committee that he wants to see a pay-per-bag system replace the tax-assessment system for garbage collection only. He said he produces about one garbage bag every two weeks, and others are as just as environmentally-conscientious.

Curbside garbage pick-up started being offered for the first time in the rural areas of Milton and Burlington in February.

"If we have to live with this situation of having waste picked up at the end of our
