Naqvi to represent NDP in Halton

By JASON MISNER
The Champion

Local supporters of the federal New Democrats are feeling as good as they have in a long time about the chances of winning the Halton riding.

Retired lawyer and author Anwar Naqvi, 67, garnered 19 of the 26 eligible votes cast at Wednesday night's nomination meeting to become the Halton federal NDP candidate. He defeated Burlington residents Renato Velocci and Anne Marsden.

Mr. Naqvi ran as the provincial NDP candidate in last fall's Ontario election and finished third.

After winning the federal nomination, a humble Mr. Naqvi promised the crowd of roughly 40 people that filled the Milton Community Resource Centre that "I will do my best to do my duty."

In an interview, he said he has high hopes for the NDP in Halton.

In the Halton riding, Gary Carr, a former 13-year Oakville MPP and Speaker of the House, is the federal Liberal candidate and businessman Dean Martin is the flagbearer for the new Conservative Party of Canada.

As far as Mr. Naqvi is concerned, Mr. Carr is a conservative in Liberal's clothing, which could persuade Liberal supporters to choose the NDP.

"We are on the moral high road," he said. "Our policies are for the people."

The Halton riding has been re-drawn. It includes Milton and northern portions of Oakville and Burlington. Halton Hills has been removed and is now part of the Wellington-Halton Hills riding.

Party associations everywhere are mobilizing their members and selecting candidates with the expectation an election will be held this year. In fact, there's strong speculation an election will be called by this month and held near the end of June.

Local NDP supporters were buoyed by the appearance of NDP national federal party president Adam Giambrone. He's visiting numerous riding associations as they prepare for a potential election.

"For the first time in a long time we have a campaign with national strength," he told the crowd, which responded with resounding applause.

In an interview, he said the Halton riding is up in the air. Given that there's no incumbent, that two conservatives are party candidates and the fact that the riding has been re-drawn, he said there's optimism the NDP can win the seat.

"We see a lot of possibilities," he said. Mr. Giambrone also pointed to recent poll results that show NDP support hovering at around 20 per cent nationally. The NDP party, which currently holds 14 seats, is lead by former Toronto councillor Jack Layton.

Brenda Dolling, the NDP candidate in the 2000 federal election, was ecstatic by the turnout. "This has been the most exciting nomination meeting we've ever had," she said, adding she's thrilled with Mr. Naqvi's nomination. "We've never had three candidates before. I feel very uplifted."

"We are a unified force."
