

Rural road work set to begin at Sixth Line, Lower Base

Road work could soon start on parts of Sixth Line and Lower Base Line.

Town council passed bylaws August 30 to make way for the reconstruction and temporary closure of Sixth Line from Lower Base Line to Britannia Road and Lower Base Line from Trafalgar Road to Ninth Line.

Reports from Director of Engineering Services Paul Cripps said both jobs could start as soon as this week.

The Sixth Line project will include realigning and replacing Bailey bridge with a two-lane permanent structure, reconstructing the road from Lower Base Line to about 400 metres north of the bridge to include gravel shoulders and a paved surface and installing guiderails and retaining walls.

On Lower Base Line, construction will involve shifting the centre line about three metres to the south.

"This realignment minimizes the removal of vegetation in front of several residents, maintains significant right-of-way hedgerows and includes adequate pavement width, including a 1.2-metre-wide shoulder," Mr. Cripps' report said.

Both projects are expected to wrap up next May.

Paving project gets approval

The Town will soon spend $50,000 on an unexpected paving project on Cedarbrae Avenue.

Town staff and councillors reported that they've received complaints about a trench that's been created on the easterly section of the road as a result of watermain work completed by the Region.

At the August 30 council meeting, Ward 4 Councillor John Challinor proposed that the easterly section of Cedarbrae be resurfaced this year.

While the westerly section of the road was recently resurfaced, the easterly portion wasn't because Town staff said it was in "good condition with no critical deficiencies."

The money for the project will be taken out of capital reserves.
