Convicted child porn distributor Kirk Pierrepoint told court he's planning on leaving his childhood home of Milton once released because of the disgrace he's brought upon himself and his family.

In his first court address since the start of the proceedings, a choked up Mr. Pierrepoint, 34, told Judge Lesley Baldwin Thursday afternoon he didn't want to leave Milton but felt he had no choice.

"I'm leaving the community I grew up in," he said when questioned about his future plans. "I've certainly disgraced myself and I've shamed my family."

He acknowledged the hurt he said he's brought upon his family.

"I've certainly broken my parents' heart and (with) my brother... I've severed ties."

He declined saying where he'd go, citing privacy reasons.

Mr. Pierrepoint was appearing at Ontario Court of Justice in Burlington for the continuation of his sentencing, which started last month.

He was charged in January with distribution of child pornography, possession of child pornography and possession of a controlled substance. He pleaded guilty to all three charges June 9.

In a January 22 raid of his Oriole Court home, members of Halton Regional Police and Ontario Provincial Police's (OPP) child pornography department found computer image files of young children in graphic sexual poses.

The raid followed a four-month investigation involving nearly a dozen police agencies across Canada.

Crown Attorney Harutyun Apel had said earlier in the proceedings that Mr. Pierrepoint offered
