

Carr seconds three private member's bills in House of Commons

Halton MP Gary Carr seconded three interesting private member's bills last week on alcohol warning labels, compensation for families of police and firefighters killed in the line of duty and mandatory marriage counselling before divorce.

Gary Carr

All three bills were introduced to the House of Commons by Mississauga South MP Paul Szabo.

Bill C-206, an act to amend the Food and Drugs Act, would require alcoholic beverages to bear a warning regarding the effects of alcohol on the ability to operate vehicles and machinery and on the health of the consumer, and the possibility of birth defects.

"Fetal alcohol syndrome is a major cause of mental retardation among Canadian children, and this is preventable. We need to get this message out to expecting mothers," said Mr. Carr. "I am pleased that this bill has been reintroduced into the House by Mr. Szabo, and I look forward to the support of all members."

The enactment of Bill C-207 would establish a fund to provide compensation to families of police and firefighters killed while on duty or in connection with their duties.

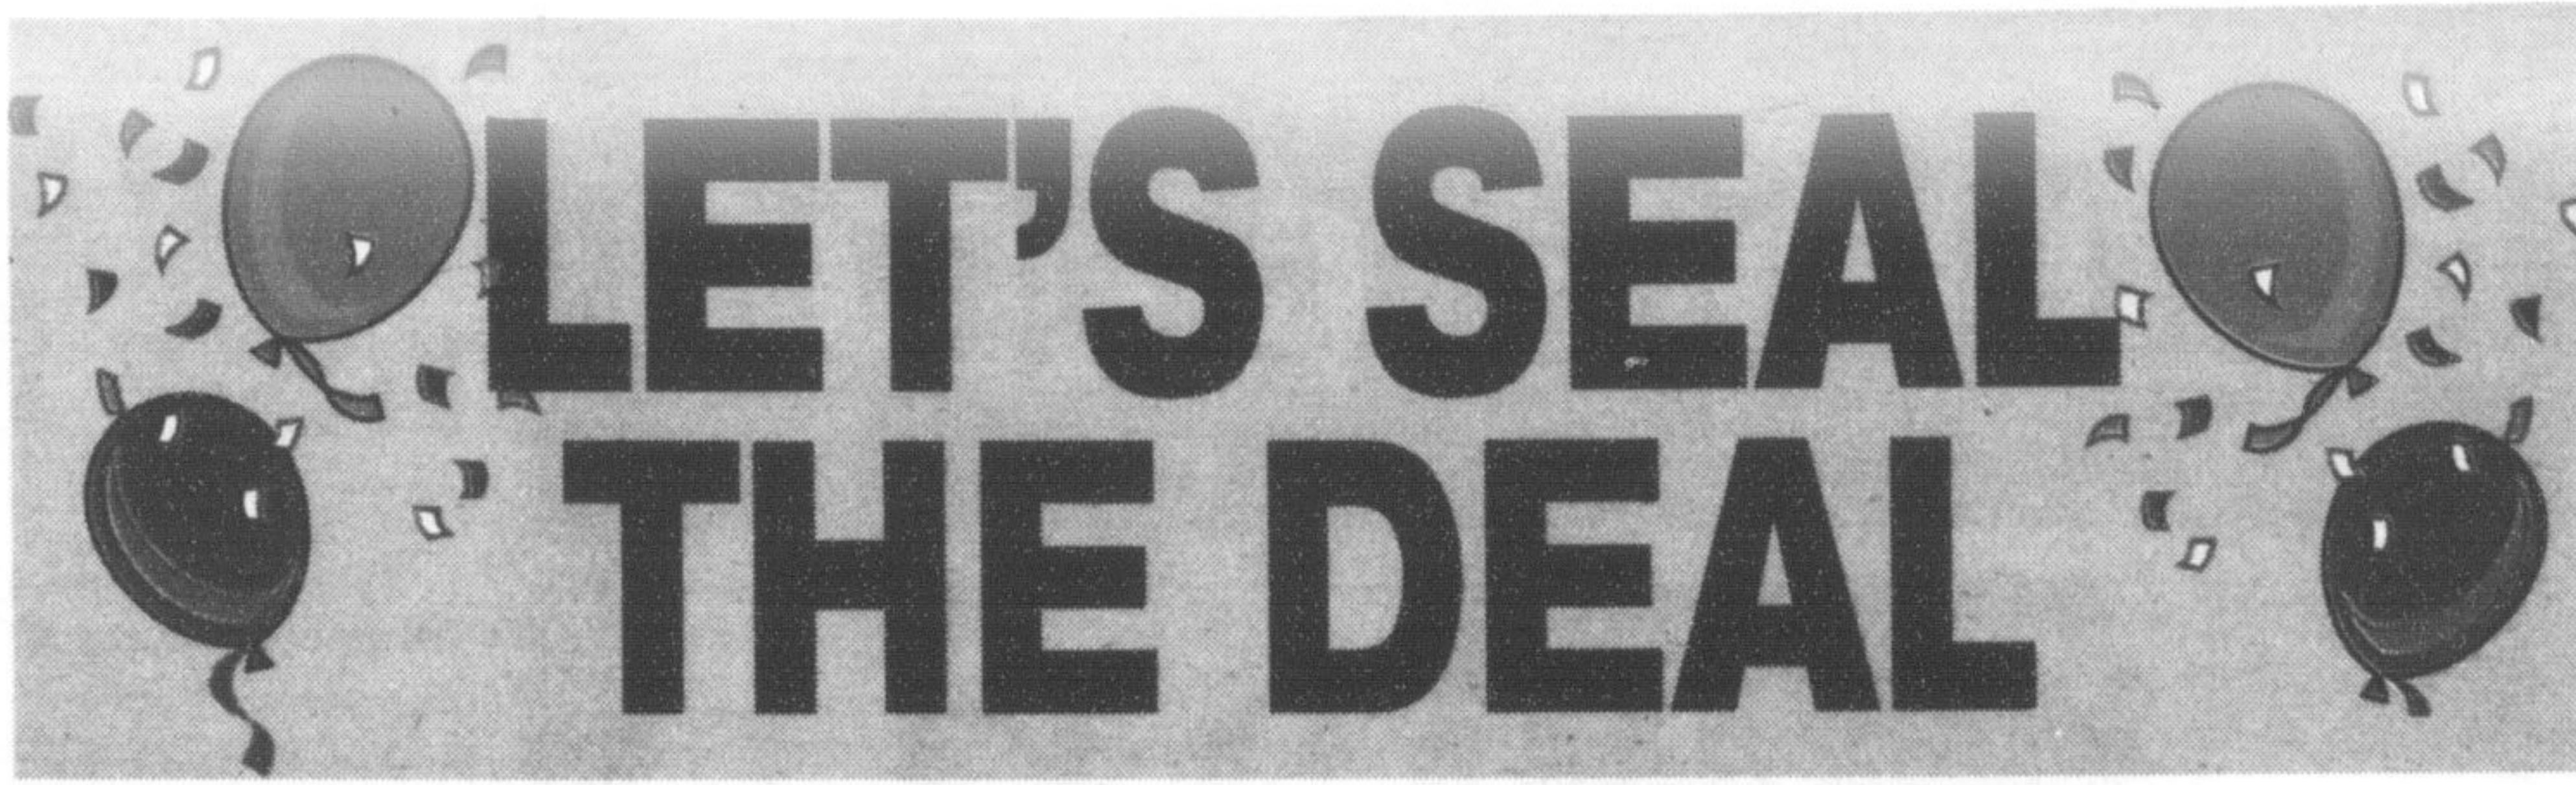

"Many dedicated individuals give their lives each year to save others. Their families deserve to be compensated for their loss," commented Mr. Carr.

The third bill, C-208 would amend the Divorce Act so that before a divorce is granted, spouses would be required to attend marriage counselling.

"This requirement would not apply on the grounds of physical and mental cruelty, and where the court agrees that counselling is inappropriate or would serve no purpose," said Mr. Carr.

The local MP seconded these bills in anticipation that they will pass and be given Royal assent.

"I was pleased to second these bills as I believe they will help to create a safer, more compassionate and united society, not only for my constituency of Halton, but for the whole of Canada."
