

How do you tell if your house is haunted, well...

I don't want to scare you, especially at Halloween, but I know of three places in Milton that are haunted.

At one of them, I can feel his wee beady eyes staring at me every time I go by. As legend goes, he's selling poultry in buckets, but I know better.

The other two places I'm not going to tell you about because you're a chicken and would be too frightened if you knew where they were.

But because I like you I'm going to give you some helpful hints so that you can determine whether your own home is inhabited by creatures not of this world.

- A ghost comes up to you and says: "Hey, I'm a ghost."
- Somebody who introduces herself as Buffy shows up at your door with wooden stakes under her arm.
- You hear spooky music every time you go down to the basement.
- You get mail addressed to Frank N. Stein.
- You hear chains rattling from the bedroom, and you know you got rid of your ball and chain when you got divorced.
- Somebody telephones you and whispers: "I know what you did last summer... but there's no way I'm going into that scary place where you live."
- Every time you're feeling a little creepy it starts to thunder and lightning.
- Your hair stands on end and you don't even have any hair.
- You live on Elm Street, your neighbour's name is Freddy and you have nightmares.
- Your black cat is afraid you'll cross its path.

- Whenever the bathroom mirror fogs up from the shower it spells: Boo!
- When you move into your new home, the phone number they assign you is 666-6666.
- Everybody else in your home thinks The Shining is a comedy.
- Your doors creak even after you oil them.
- Every time you make a Bloody Mary, the glass mysteriously empties, and it wasn't you who drank it.
- You look under the stairs and there are people living there. You look in your cornfield and there are children living there, too.
- Every time there's a full moon your wife spends a lot of time in the bathroom shaving.
- You look out your window and you see those flying monkeys from The Wizard of Oz.
- Nobody else in your home gets out of bed until the sun goes down.
- Your kids keep calling you Mummy instead of Mommy.
