Easy fellas

Haydar comes through with key points in wins

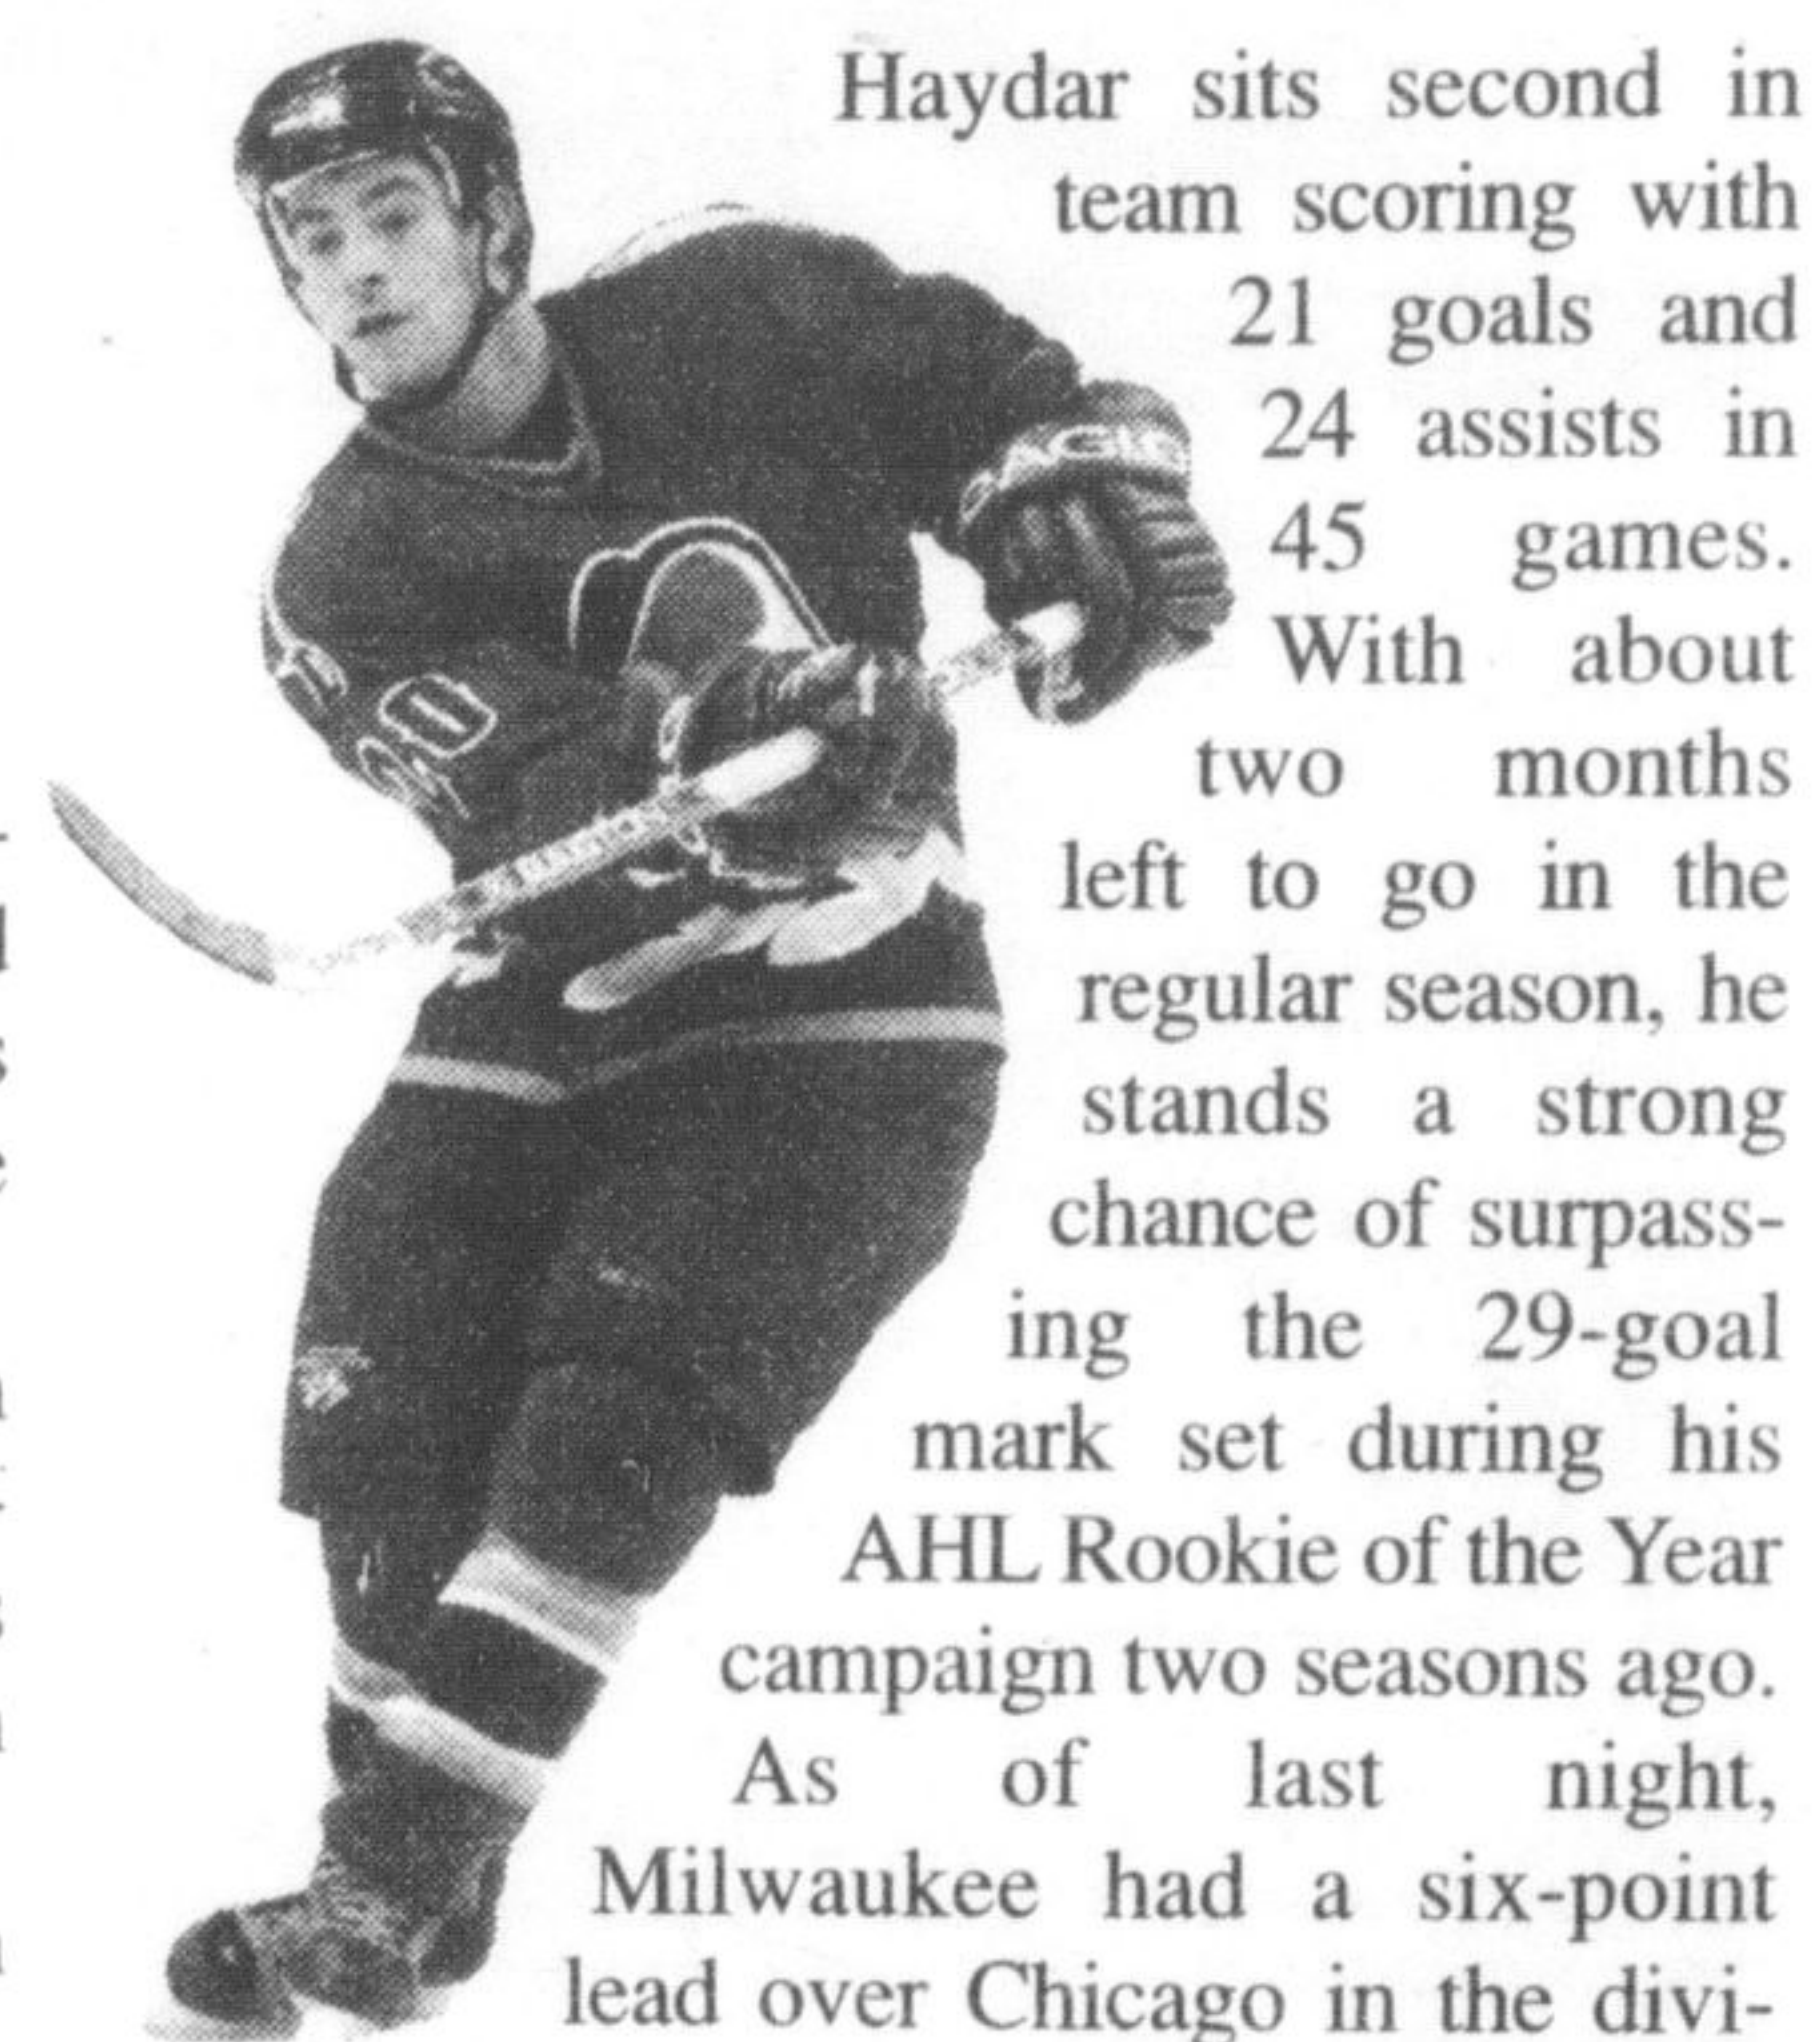

Factors into three straight game winners for AHL Admirals

Just call him the difference maker. Heading into last night's home-ice showdown with Cincinnati, Darren Haydar had factored into three game winners in as many contests for the AHL Milwaukee Admirals.

Milton's 25-year-old right winger began this mini streak Saturday night with a second-period powerplay deposit that gave his West Division-leading team a 3-2 decision over Grand Rapids.

From there, he assisted on winners in back-to-back road victories against St. John's this past week.

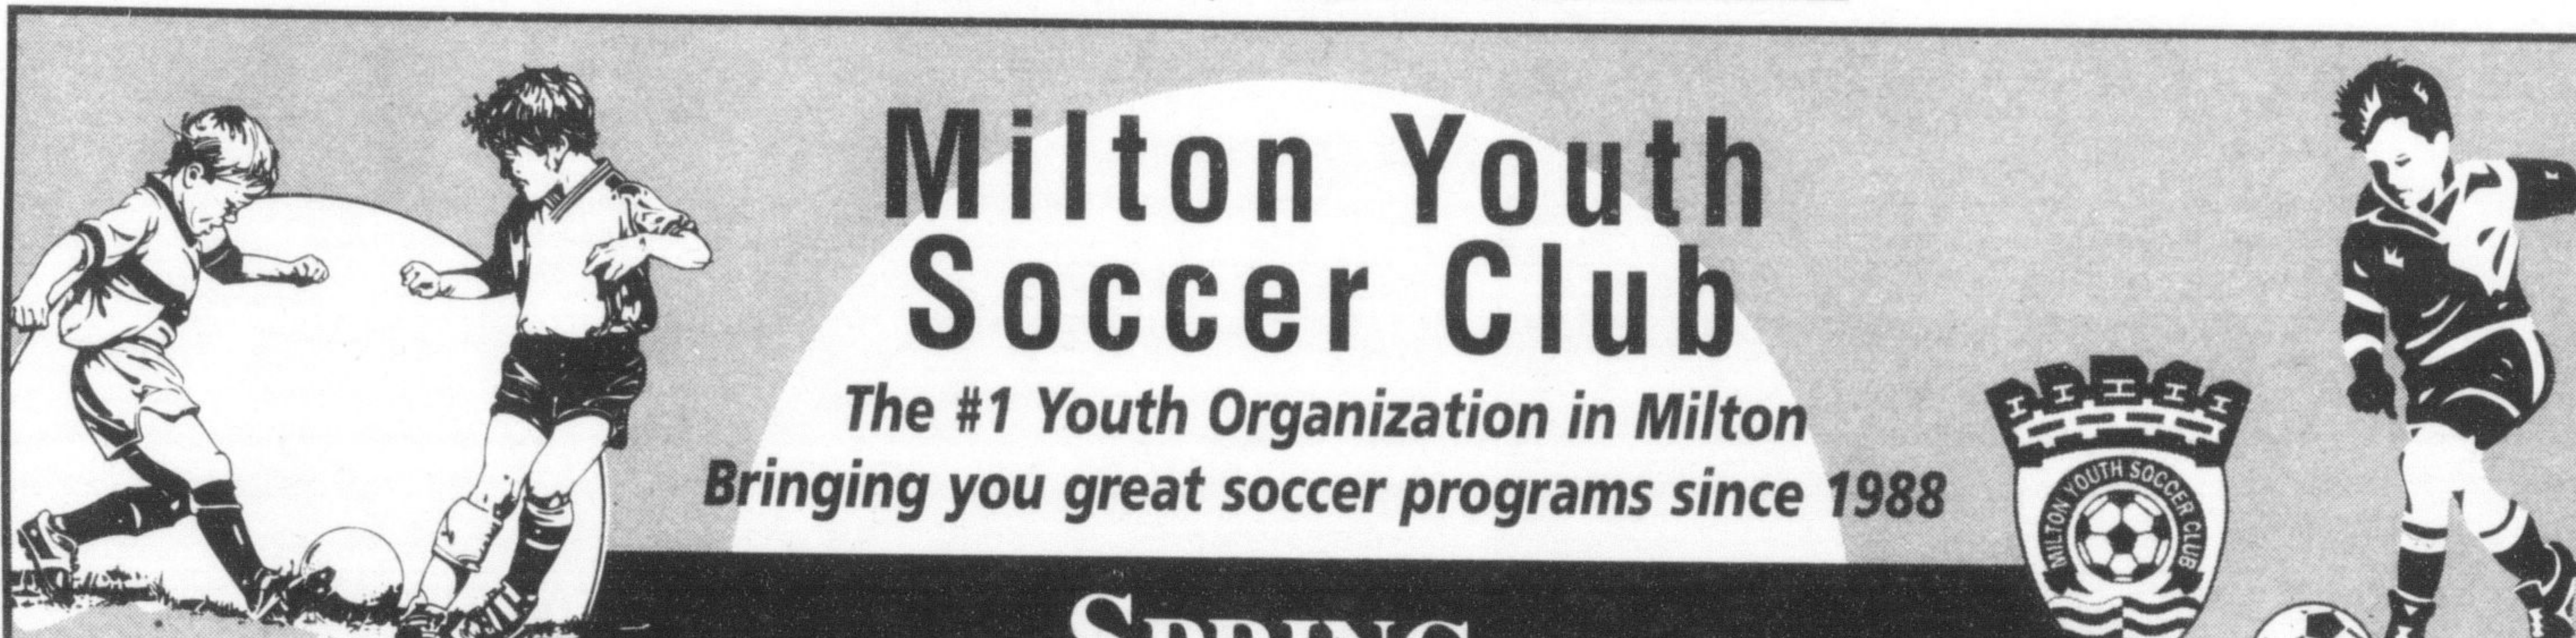

First he set up Simon Gamache early in the third in Monday's 5-2 triumph, and the following evening he figured in a late winner by Dan Hamhuis that gave Milwaukee a 4-3 win. He also sank second and third-period equalizers that night for his biggest single-game output in recent weeks.

Haydar sits second in team scoring with 21 goals and 24 assists in 45 games. With about two months left to go in the regular season, he stands a strong chance of surpassing the 29-goal mark set during his AHL Rookie of the Year campaign two seasons ago. As of last night, Milwaukee had a six-point lead over Chicago in the division and was challenging for top spot overall in the league. Haydar and his defending Calder Cup champion Admirals visit Houston tonight.

Fans can catch the local NHL hopeful in action close to home in early April, when Milwaukee visits Hamilton's Copps Coliseum for a two-game stint against the Bulldogs.
