Nominations sought for Women of the Year

The Women's Centre of Halton is seeking nominations for Halton's eighth annual Women of the Year Awards.

"There are many women in Halton whose exemplary service to others raises the bar on leadership, responsiveness, action, perseverance and social awareness," said Women's Centre Executive Director Melvina Walter.

"They are our neighbours, relatives and colleagues — women who exemplify integrity and determination."

Through the awards program, The Women's Centre is able to bring special recognition to the roles that women play in the community life of Halton — women who are inspiring, and whose interest and action help to change lives.

The submissions the centre received last year were representative of the significant contribution that women make daily to the community.

In 2004, the four award recipients were Priscilla de Villiers, Connie Smith, Audrey

Cairns and Patricia Hurst.

The awards will be presented at a reception and ceremony May 3 at the Glen Abbey Golf Club in Oakville. The guest speaker at this year's event is Rona Maynard, writer and former editor of Chatelaine magazine. Tickets cost $40 per person and can be ordered through The Women's Centre.

Nomination forms can be obtained by visiting The Women's Centre at Hopedale Mall, 1515 Rebecca St, suite 210, in Oakville, calling (905) 847-9104 or by e-mailing admin@haltonwomenscentre.org.

The form can also be downloaded from www.haltonwomenscentre.org. A personal profile sheet should also accompany the form and nominations must be returned by April 10.

Proceeds from the event are designated to support the work of The Women's Centre of Halton, a registered charitable organization.
