Region seeking mandatory flu shots

By MELANIE HENNESSEY

The Champion

After another season of low influenza immunization rates among local health care workers, the Region is once again appealing to the Province to make their flu shots mandatory.

A recent report from Halton Medical Officer of Health Dr. Bob Nosal showed large decreases in staff flu immunization rates at most of the region's hospitals for 2004 (numbers recorded December 15).

The most significant change was seen at William Osler Health Care in Georgetown, which had a 32 per cent decrease in immunization over the previous year.

"Clearly that is totally unacceptable and we need to deal with it," said Dr. Nosal of the large decline.

At Halton Healthcare Services — both the Milton and Oakville hospitals — a seven per cent decrease was reported.

Joseph Brant Memorial Hospital in Burlington was the only location to see an increase, going up 11 per cent between 2003 and 2004.

Even with that increase though, Dr. Nosal reported that none of Halton's hospitals achieved the provincial target health-care worker flu immunization rate of 70 per cent.

He told members of the health and social services committee at a recent meeting that staff is doing everything it can in terms of advocacy when it comes to flu shots.

"What we need is a change in the actual (provincial) legislation," he said.

The committee and Regional council both supported a recommendation that Regional Chairman Joyce Savoline write to the Minister of Health and Long-Term Care again requesting legislation for mandatory influenza immunization of health care workers.

Ms Savoline made a similar request after the 2003-2004 flu season, but so far the ministry hasn't taken any action.

Dr. Nosal's report also indicated that seven of Halton's long-term care facilities met the ministry target of 90 per cent immunization coverage for health care workers last year, up from three in 2003.

The report also said that, "Resident
