Porenta disappointed with showing in B.C.

Commonwealth Games qualifying bid falls short

Securing her first national medal in the 50-metre freestyle late last month in Victoria, B.C. came as little consolation for Jennifer Porenta.

The 20-year-old University of Toronto swimmer capped her weekend efforts with a third-place finish in her shortest race — clocking in at 26.55 seconds.

But since that fell just short of the qualifying time for next summer's Commonwealth Games in Melbourne, Australia, Porenta was hardly satisfied with her performance.

The same could be said for back-to-back seventh-place finishes in 100 and 200-metre freestyle competition, in which the top-four finishes qualified for Melbourne.

Her 57.48s and 2:03.92 efforts in those two races were well off her personal bests.

"I was actually feeling pretty good going in. I'd been training better than I had in a while," said Porenta. "Things just didn't come together. I guess it's too early in the season for me to be close to my best times."

The U of T swimmer heads to Barbados for a training session shortly after the holidays before taking part in an international meet in Switzerland. From there she'll take part in the university provincial and national championships, both serving as warm-ups for next summer's Pan Pacific Championship trials in Montreal.

Twisters reign supreme

North Halton's B peewee girls hockey team took top honours at last weekend's Peterborough Ice Kats Tournament — thanks in no small part to a couple of local players.

Tamara McKelvie stood tall between the pipes in two of the Twisters' games — including a 5-1 semifinal victory over the Markham-Stouffville Stars — while fellow Miltonian Vanessa Hartwick tied for second in overall team scoring with four assists.

Her biggest helper came in the championship, where North Halton enjoyed flawless cage work from Terrilyn Digout to blank the Waterloo Ravens.

Hartwick also set up two goals in the semifinals, plus one in a weekend-opening 3-3 stalemate with Markham-Stouffville.

The Twisters lost just one of five games in Peterborough and gave up only six goals, due largely to shutouts against Waterloo and the Hamilton Hawks in third-round play.

TONIGHT'S TICKET
MILTON ICEHAWKS
Milton IceHawks (24-2-1-1) vs. Oakville Blades (13-11-3-2)
Game time: 7:30 p.m. at Twin Rinks Arena in Oakville
Last meeting: Oakville won 4-2 Nov. 12 in Oakville
Who to watch for: After both losing and getting injured in his last encounter with the Blades, starting netminder Zach Kleiman will be eager for a little pay-back.
The skinny: Milton will need a little more discipline and intensity than during its last trip to Oakville to prevail.
Champion's pick: Milton by a goal
