

Sweet water season coming up quickly

For many people, the arrival of spring is synonymous with maple syrup time.

Once again at Crawford Lake Conservation Area, this special time will be celebrated with its abundance of Sweet Water Season activities.

Sweet Water Season runs from next Friday to April 9 on weekends and holidays, and daily during the March Break (March 13 to 17).

The highlight of the season is the First Nations-style maple demonstrations in the reconstructed Iroquoian village. Throughout the day, staff will teach visitors about Iroquoian sweet water traditions and prepare fresh cornbread dripping with maple syrup for visitors to sample.

Of course, maple products will be for sale at the gift shop, and the hiking trails will be open.

This year's Sweet Water Day festival will take place March 12, and is the main event of the Sweet Water season. It runs from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. and will feature Anishinaabe artist and storyteller Aaron Bell.

Besides the maple demonstrations, visitors will also be able to take part in a discovery hunt, do free crafts and more.

The cost is $6 per person and free for kids four and younger.

Crawford Lake is located at the corner of Guelph Line and Steeles Avenue. For more information, call (905) 854-0234 or visit www.conservationhalt.on.ca.
