

Photographer of the year

Graham Paine, named the province's 2005 Photographer of the Year by the Ontario Community Newspaper Association Saturday, showcases some of his recent work.

According to judge Frank O'Connor, co-ordinator of the Photojournalism Program at Loyalist College, Graham delivers "Consistently strong, clean images that capture the day-to-day heartbeat of the community. Solid well-executed images time after time."

Paine was also Photographer of the Year in 2002 and finished second in 2001.

The OCNA represents more than 120 newspapers across Ontario.
