Tree cutter found

By Stephanie Thiessen CANADIAN CHAMPION STAFF

Guilty as charged. That was the verdict delivered yesterday in a highlypublicized tree-cutting trial that has drawn interest from across the region.

The testimony of Burlington resident George Vastis, who was convicted of 44 counts of tree cutting, lacked credibility and trustworthiness, justice of the peace Jerry Woloschuk said yesterday at Ontario Provincial Offences Court in Milton as he explained his decision.

It contained exaggerations, contradictions, inaccuracies and implausible statements, Woloschuk told the court.

In the end, Vastis's explanations just didn't hold up, he said.

"Mr. Vastis decided to clear large areas not considering the consequences," Woloschuk said, adding he has reached the conclusion the land was cleared for a golf course. "It's clear this was done without any concern for the environment and in contempt of the rules."

Vastis and his company now face up to $840,000 in fines for cutting trees in a woodlot and in an Environmentally Sensitive Area (ESA) in April and July of 2003 contrary to the Region of Halton's tree conservation bylaw and the Forestry Act. He pleaded not guilty to the charges in 2004.

Outside the courtroom, a visibly angry Vastis said he thought the court simply wanted to set a precedent and that the case was "political." "If I was so sophisticated, I would've had the whole forest down and nobody would know," he said, responding to Woloschuk's statement that Vastis is a knowledgeable businessman who should've known better.

He added he plans to appeal the decision. "I'll go to the Supreme court if need to."

Defence lawyer David Crocker said the ruling's unfortunate for Vastis.

"He (Woloschuk) couldn't have been more harsh," he said.

Vastis' Milton property, close to the Oakville border, is located south of Britannia Road and north of Hwy. 407 between Regional Road 25 and Trafalgar Road.

For the past two years, Crown Attorney John Olah and Crocker have been arguing in court over Vastis' intent when he had more than 20 acres of trees plowed down in swathes.

The defence has argued Vastis was creating more farmland to lower his taxes, while the Crown has said the land now looks more like a future golf course.

One by one yesterday, Woloschuk knocked down each of the defence's arguments.

He summarized the opinions of numerous experts who said the cleared land looked more like a future golf course than farmland, for which it
