Attracting birds to your backyard

(NC)—Knowing what types of bird food and feeders go together will ensure success in attracting the birds you want to welcome to your backyard.

It goes without saying that a sheltered and quiet backyard space with safe access to food works best. By placing the feeder close to trees and shrubs in plain view, homeowners can easily monitor feeder levels and the birds are better protected from predators and extreme weather.

It's also important to keep backyard squirrels, rabbits, deer and chipmunks from emptying bird feeders. By establishing a separate ground level platform-style feeder with Scotts Squirrel and Small Animal Food, small animals will continue to visit and provide enjoyment, but will leave the bird feeder alone!

For more information: Reference books from your library and Internet Web sites can offer information on bird feeding. Scotts Canada offers its Guide to Attracting Birds brochure, available exclusively at Canadian Tire stores where Scotts Wild Bird Food is sold. The easy-to-use reference assists in matching food and feeders to the many different bird types.
