Diverting meal money wrong, says MP

Halton MP Garth Turner is calling on the House of Commons to reverse a decision that allows federal politicians to divert their meal money into paying their mortgages.

The local politician argues if an MP wants to buy a piece of real estate, it shouldn't be subsidized by taxpayers, pointing out that MPs are already allowed to spend up to $24,000 per year, tax-free, on rental accommodation in Ottawa.

"Any politician buying a home, like any other Canadian, expects to eventually sell for more and make a tax-free profit," Turner said.

"So it is plain wrong for MPs to expect to get a mortgage subsidy when every one of their voters has to pay their home loan with hard-won, after-tax dollars. MPs now earn three times the average family income and also receive expense money, so not only can they afford to pay a mortgage, but they should not be insulated from reality by this kind of scheme."

The all-party body that determines MP benefits has decided, according to Liberal whip Karen Redman, to allow daily allowances intended to offset the cost of meals for MPs when away from home to be used to pay mortgages on second homes politicians buy in Ottawa.

Turner has now written the House of Commons board of internal economy asking it to call off the whole concept.

"This is exactly the kind of perceived double-dipping that makes taxpayers cynical and disbelieving," he said.

"I also think it's not an example of the political accountability and transparency the Harper Conservatives are trying to bring to federal politics."
