Garth Turner

Turner says his allegiance remains with the people

member of the Halton Conservative riding association were contacted by phone regarding a meeting being organized to review his candidacy.

According to Turner, the callers — who identified themselves as being with the Conservative Party of Canada — also expressed concern with his position on same-sex marriage.

Keene confirmed that he was the person who booked the hall to hold the meeting, which he said was held to discuss the reopening of the same-sex marriage debate as well as why Turner decided not to support it and what could be done to bring the issue to the floor.

The whole situation led to Defend Marriage Coalition head Charles McVety and Turner once again publicly criticizing each other.

While McVety said it seems Turner feels "anyone who dares to challenge him is breaching his entitlement," Turner called Defend Marriage's move "McVety's grab for power."

Board to acclaim Turner

At press time last night, Turner's acclamation as the Halton Conservative candidate for the next election was expected at a party board of directors meeting.

The local MP expressed his gratitude for the people who came forward last week to support him.

"This experience reaffirms my belief that folks here want an MP who represents them first, and party second," he said.

"I pledge that as long as I am in Parliament, my allegiance will remain with the people."
