

Public consultation is underway

 being prepared, which will be presented to regional council next spring, will include preliminary environmental, health, air quality, transportation and financial assessments necessary for a public consultation process and council's ultimate decision.

The EFW facility will help lengthen the life of Halton's landfill — which is expected to reach capacity by 2030 — by up to two decades and could cost anywhere from $300 to $800 million, depending on the size. It could be up and running by 2010.

The plant is described by the Region as an electrical power generation plant that converts the heat energy in solid waste material into renewable energy using advanced thermal technologies. The thermal methods could range from high-tech incineration to gasification, plasma arc or thermal cracking technologies, which are non-burn methods. It's not known at this point which technology the Region would adopt.

And while there would be emissions from the plant, Halton staff has said they would be well within the Province's guidelines and that the most modern pollution control equipment would be used.

The Region recently received confirmation from Ontario Environment Minister Laurel Broten that it has been approved under the Environmental Assessment Act to create such a facility whenever the municipality determines one is needed to manage Halton's waste.

Savoline emphasized this approval sets the Region apart from other municipalities that would also like to build EFW facilities, but haven't received the go-ahead.

Consultation with the public on the EFW initiative is already getting underway. Residents can send their comments or information requests to efw@halton.ca or phone (905) 825-6000, ext. 7920.

Which Costly Mistakes Will Old Milton & Dorset Park Home Owners Make?

HALTON - A new report has just been released which reveals 7 costly mistakes that most homeowners make when selling their home, and a 9 Step System that will help you sell your home fast and for the most amount of money.

This industry reports shows clearly how the traditional ways of selling homes have become increasingly less and less effective in today's market. The fact of the matter is that a full three quarters of homesellers don't get what they want for their home and become disillusioned and - worse - financially disadvantaged when they put their home on the market.

As this report uncovers, most homesellers make 7 deadly mistakes that cost them literally thousands of dollars. The good news is that each and every one of these mistakes is entirely preventable. In answer to this issue, industry insiders have prepared a free special report entitled "The 9 Step System to Get Your Home Sold Fast and For Top Dollar".
