

The Lighthouse Program for Grieving Children

Do you know a child who is grieving the death of a parent or sibling?

The Lighthouse Program for Grieving Children offers hope and encouragement to bereaved children and those who are a part of their lives. By providing peer support in a safe, caring, non-judgmental environment, children, teenagers and their families can receive the support they need as they cope with their loss and grow through their grief.

- Ongoing, open groups for children and teens ages 3-18 years
- Concurrent group available to parents and caregivers
- Groups meet twice monthly

It's too bad I won't be around for the express people mover

I stopped and watched the old black car rattle down the country road.

It was a Model T or Model A, I couldn't tell for sure because it was dark. Actually, I wouldn't be able to tell unless somebody told me, but that's beside the point. And it wasn't exactly a country road, but it looked like one at night.

Anyway, for a few moments I was taken back to a time when those cars were common, and I wondered what it would be like to live during those days. I didn't wonder too long.

and television shows that it's not hard to imagine.

I like the time we're living in right now just fine.

I remember when I thought it would be heaven to watch every NFL football game on a Sunday afternoon. Now, I just have to flick the remote and I can watch every football, baseball, and hockey game.

remember having to work on a typewriter, and then thought how cool it was to get one with a correcting rib-

I remember wishing I could read newspapers from other cities once in a while, and now I can read newspapers from every city from around the world A on the Internet.

I remember wishing I was a big rock star or movie idol, and that women would throw themselves at me. Still waiting on that one.

What I really thought about when I saw that old car was how in a hundred years from now people will be looking back at this time, and wondering how we could have lived without some particular thing that hasn't been invented yet. I mean we wonder how people managed before we had television, computers, cell phones, microwaves.

You could watch The Jetsons and get an idea. Every futuristic movie or book has people flying their cars instead of driving so that's pretty much a given.

At the very least some time in the future they're going to have to do something about traffic.

And that's just in Milton. We're still a ways from when we can be beamed places like on Star Trek, but the fact is people want and need to get places quicker and easier.

went to Scarborough a couple weeks ago to TSN, which is inside the CTV building at McCowan and 401. I was doing some stuff there, but told them I had to leave at around 3:15 p.m. No way did I want to fight the traffic. It took me over two hours to get home.

If the roads were clear, I could have made it faster in that Model T or Model

So, I think what we're going to see in the future are express people movers. I'm not talking about buses or trains, which still take a long time, but some supersonic deal.

Maybe you can even take your car, like a ferry on land. You go to the sta-
