

Veteran councillors running again

Long-time Milton politicians Brian Penman and Rick Day are looking to hold onto their Ward 1 councillor spots for another term.

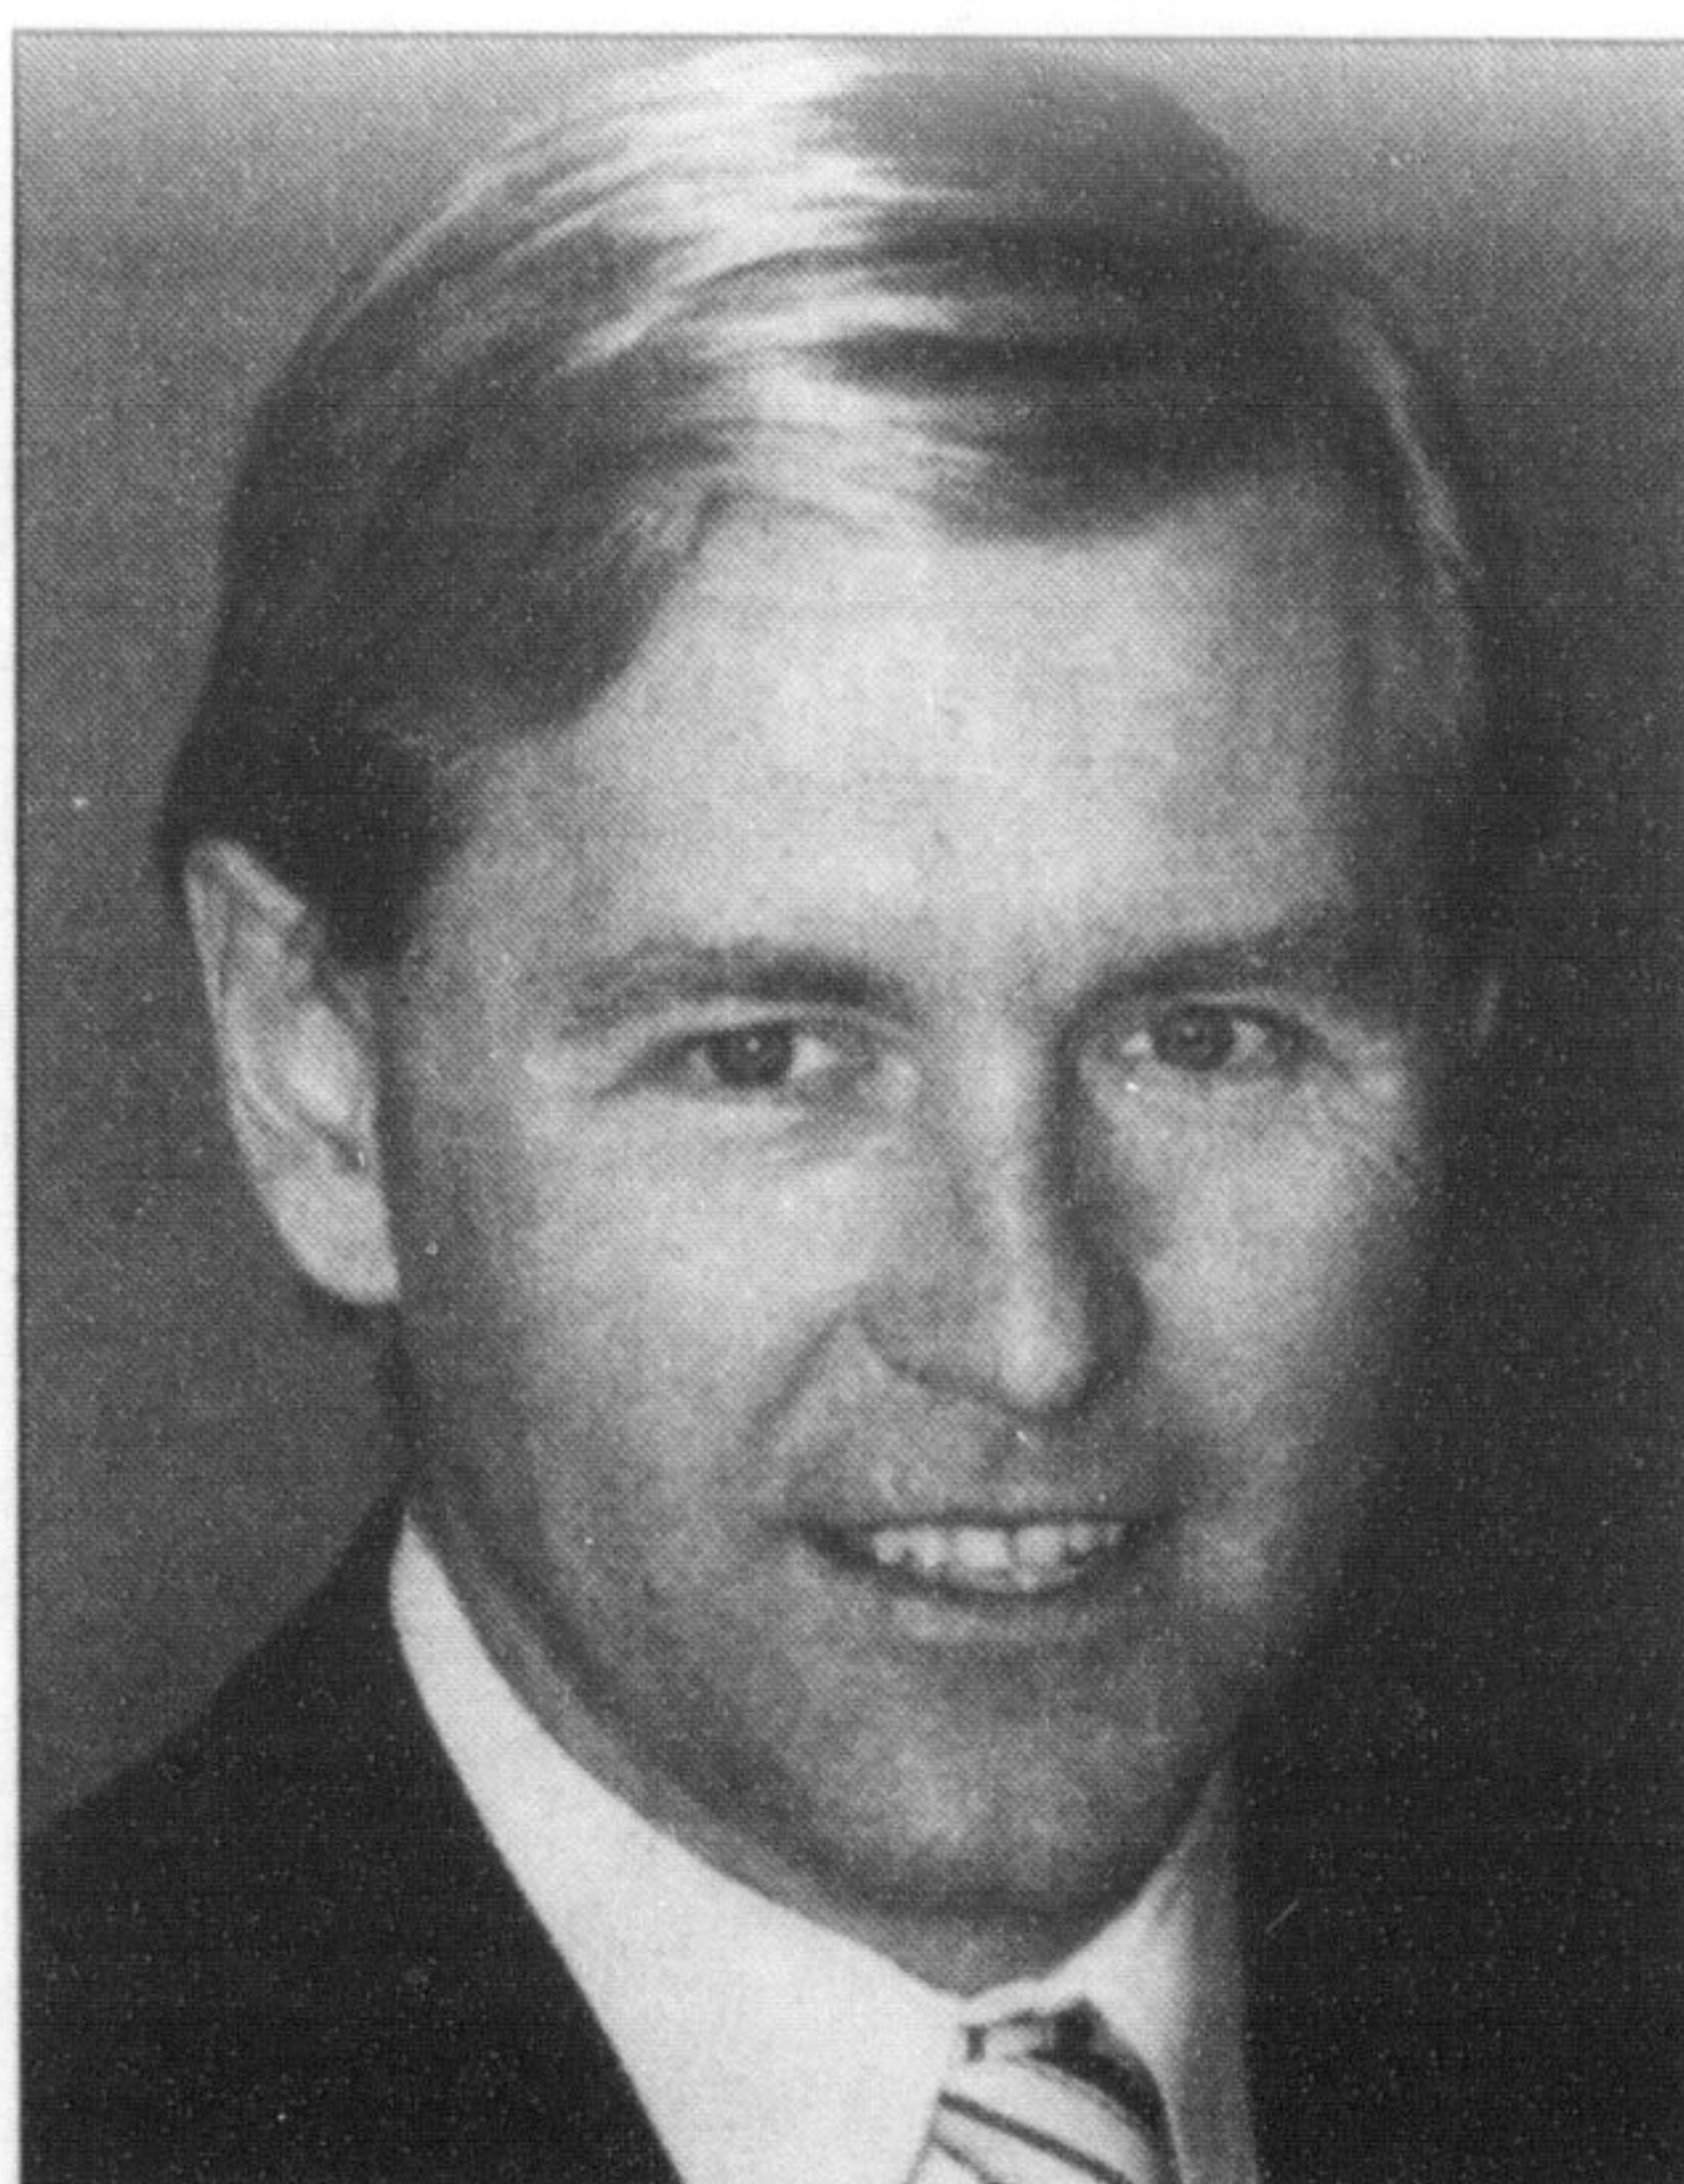

The local residents, who've been on council since 1977 and 1974 respectively, both recently filed to run in this fall's municipal election. They're going up against newcomers Mike Cluett and Eugene Cummins and past candidate Greg Nelson.

When asked why he decided to run again, Day told The Champion, "I feel really capable of doing the job based on my experience and energy. I think I'm at the height of my powers."

He expressed concern with plans other levels of government have for Ward 1, including the Region's energy-from-waste facility and the several proposed power plants (the Ontario Power Authority will only approve one).

"It just seems like Ward 1 is under attack from so many angles," he said. "I'm spoiling for the fight."

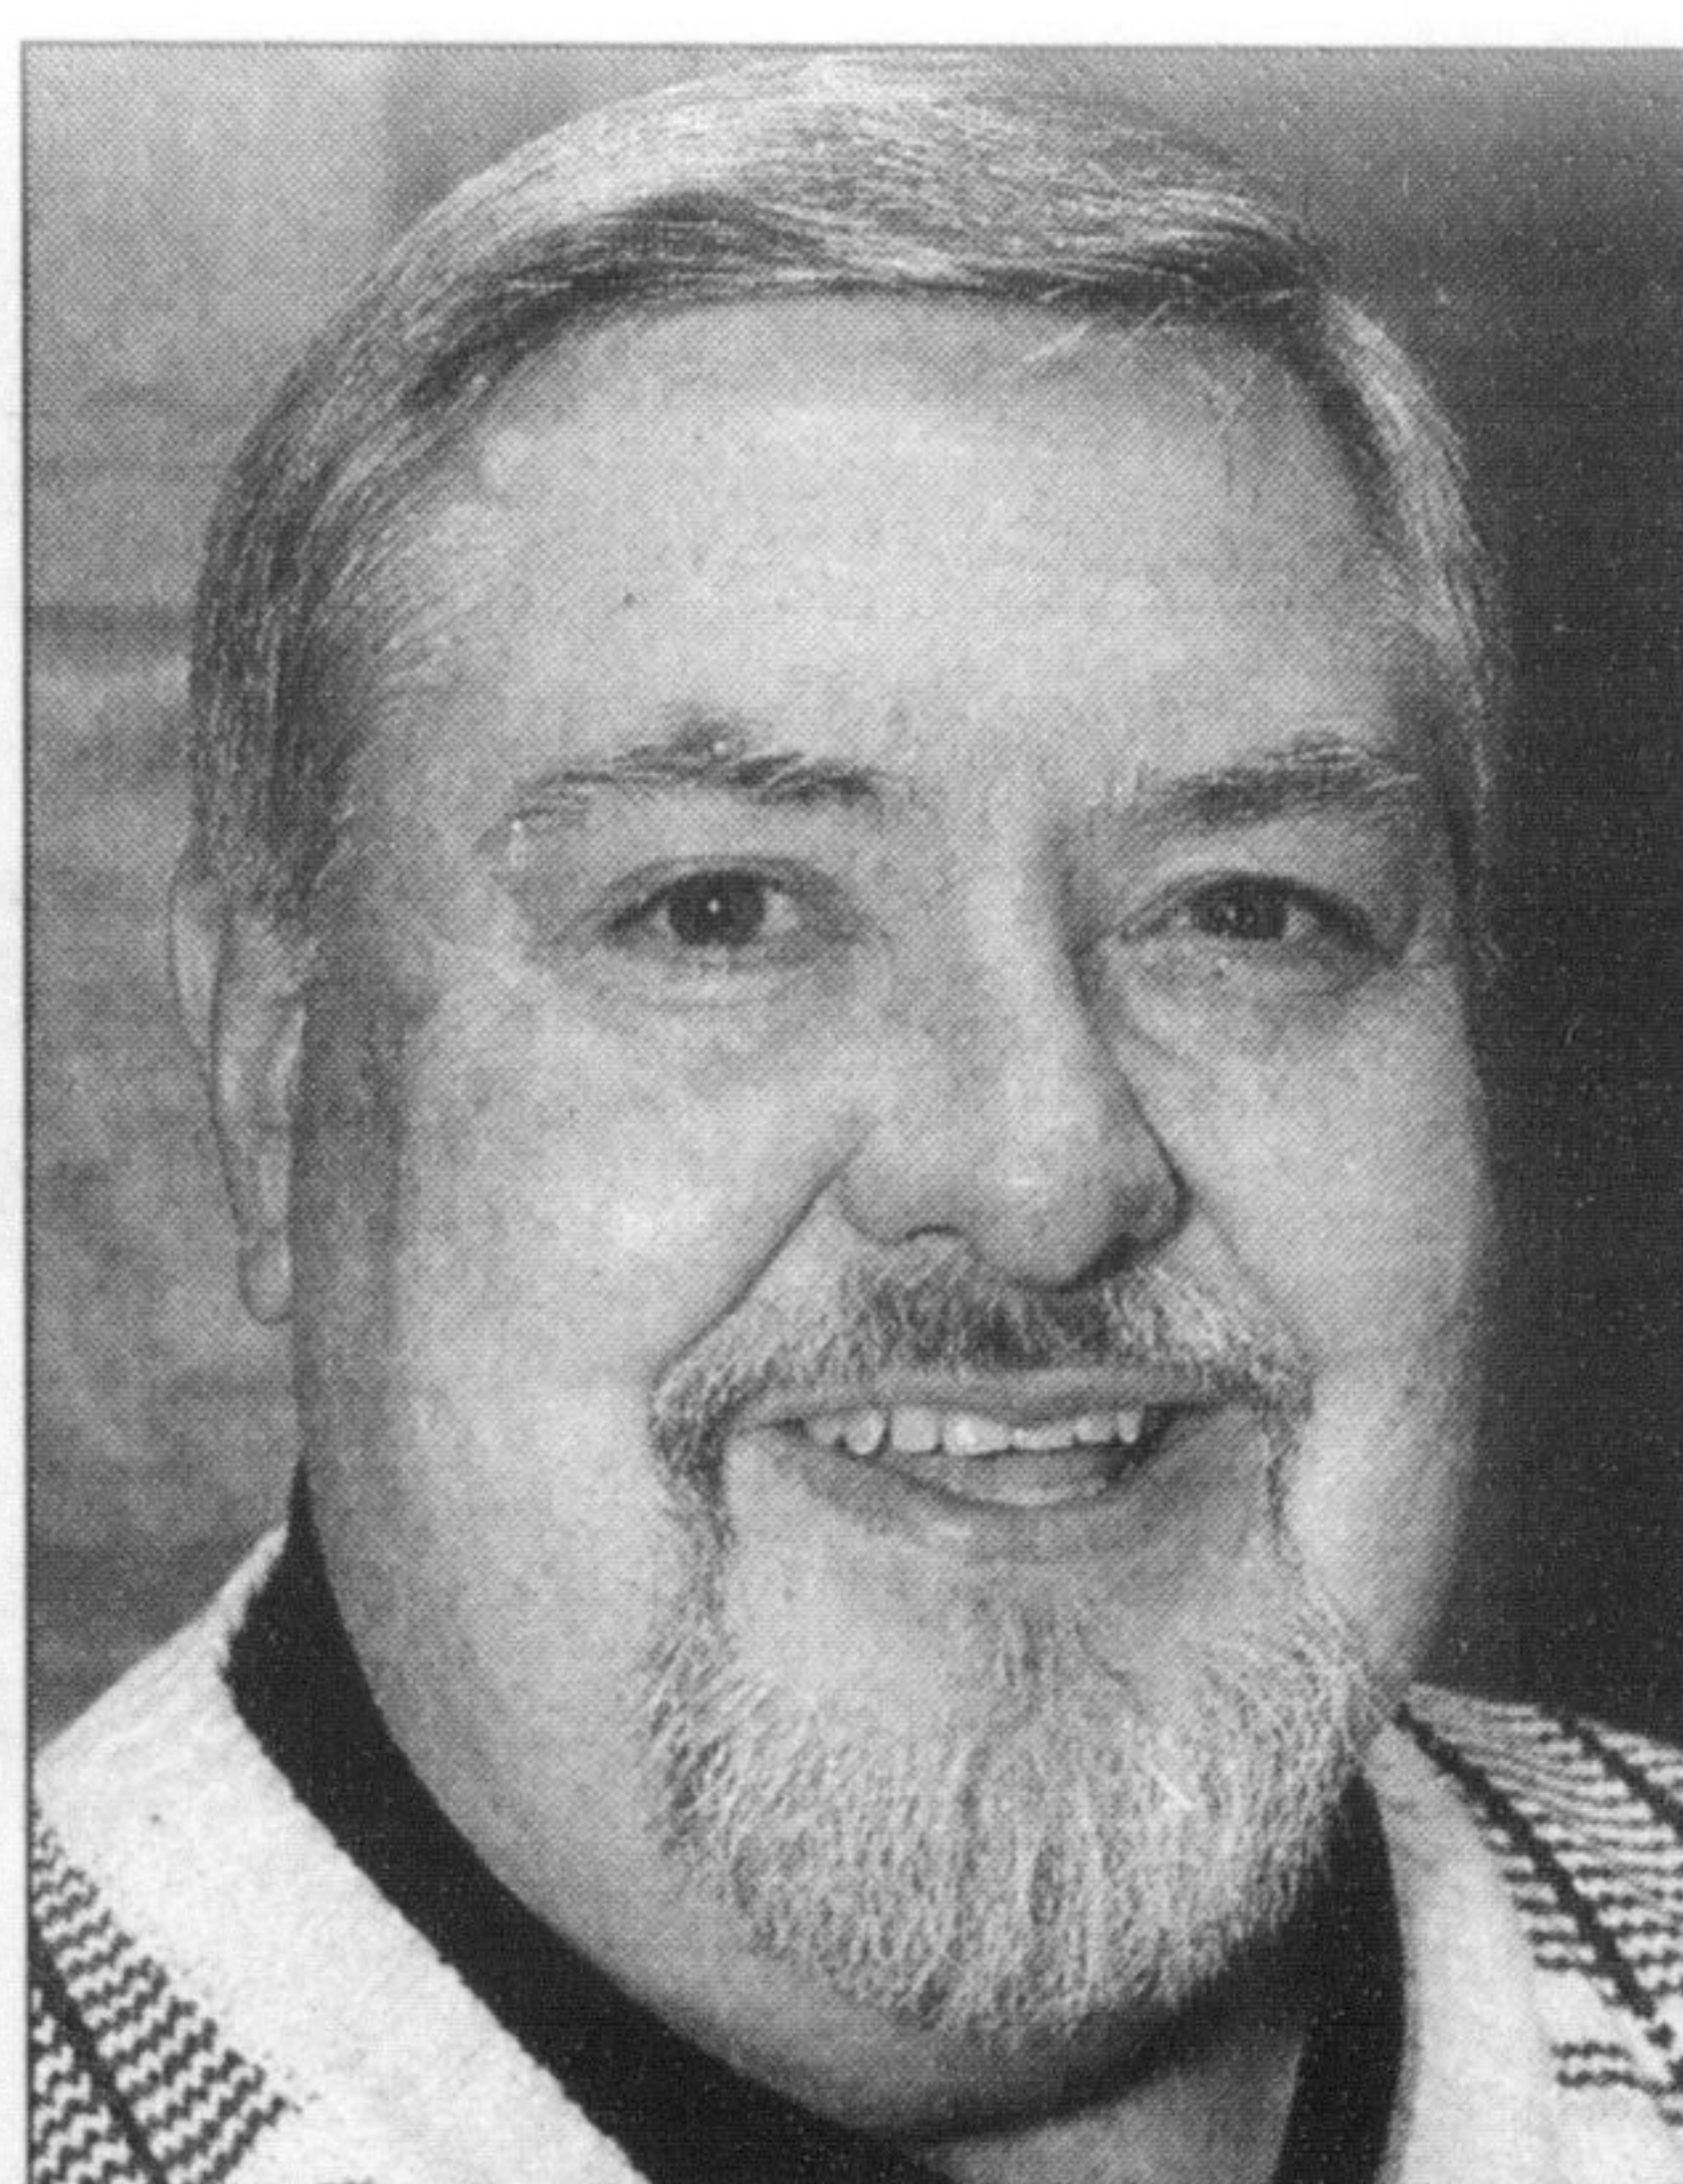

Day was elected to Oakville town council in 1970 before the municipal boundaries changed.

In his working life, he owns a business, tax and real estate legal practice in Oakville, Richard Day and Associates.

Penman is currently the chair of Conservation Halton and the Town's administration and planning committee. He's a retired Oakville Trafalgar High School teacher.

At press time yesterday, calls made to Penman by The Champion hadn't been returned.

Turner Drive resident John Daly also threw his hat in the ring late last week and is now contending with incumbents Wendy Schau and John Challinor for the Ward 4 councillor seat.
