School uniform trial in works

By Melanie Cummings
SPECIAL TO THE CHAMPION

Guidelines and timelines are now laid out to introduce mandatory uniforms in at least two Halton Catholic elementary schools in September 2007.

All 13 recommendations compiled by a uniform pilot committee were presented to trustees of the Halton Catholic District School Board last Tuesday night.

A vote will likely be held after the election at the November 21 board meeting.

Guardian Angels School in Milton and St. Gabriel School in Burlington are slated to pilot the two-year project. There's room to add an Oakville elementary school, and the as yet unnamed new elementary school scheduled to open in Milton may climb on board, too.

The colours of the mandatory uniforms are navy and white with the school's name embroidered at the top left breast.

After receiving proposals from eight companies, Toronto manufacturer McCarthy's was chosen by the committee which is made up of board staff, principals, trustees and parents.

The estimated cost of a basic uniform of a short-sleeved golf shirt and pants is $48.

Catholic School Council chairs and principals of the two participating schools were to discuss the report yesterday.

In early November flyers will go home to parents informing them of an upcoming information night that will further explain the details of the pilot.

In January 2009 the uniform pilot committee will either: phase in other interested schools through a survey or in consultation with the local school council, principal and area supervisor; impose a blanket mandatory uniform for all Halton elementary schools; or review other alternatives.

The committee decided that consequences for non-compliance will escalate after three verbal reminders by the principal to the student that will be accompanied by written notification to the parent and teacher.

That will be followed by a formal written note sent home that may indicate the student has lost certain privileges, will face detentions or an additional assignment, be sent home to change their clothes or, as a last resort, be suspended.

Halfway through the pilot, in September 2008, trustees will be given a follow up report.

The pilot is the result of parents from St. Gabriel who requested in November 2005 that the board change its policy of participation in school uniforms at the elementary level from voluntary to mandatory.

A resolution to create a committee charged with establishing an exclusive two-year pilot for mandatory uniforms was approved in April.
