Ashby scholarship awarded

A graduate of Milton District High School was recently awarded a scholarship established to remember a much-loved student and athlete killed tragically in 2004.

This year's Paula Ashby Scholarship was awarded to 18-year-old Ben Clifford at the school's recent commencement ceremony.

At the ceremony, Cathy Doyle, chair of the award committee, said Clifford is a committed student and athlete.

"Ben not only participated, he led by example, motivated others and set the bar for all to follow," Doyle told the crowd.

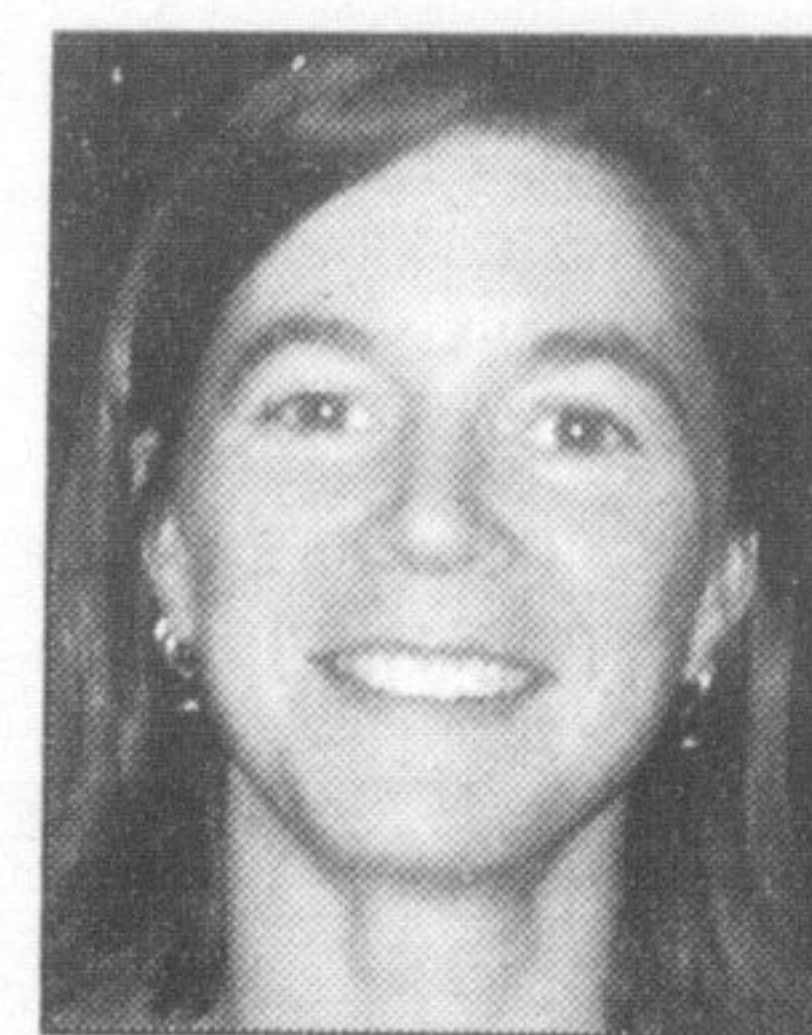

Clifford was involved in football, basketball, hockey and soccer during his time at Milton District. He was selected the Most Valuable Player for multiple teams and was chosen Athlete of the Year for three consecutive years.

Off the field, he served as the Student Athletic Association president, co-ordinated Hoops for Heart fundraisers and was a student leader in the school's Wilderness North program.

"Ben encourages, inspires, leads, participates and challenges all, including himself, to be the best at what they do," Doyle said.

This is the second time the annual $1,000 scholarship has been given out. It was established by the Ashby family in memory of Paula, who died in a car accident in Calgary.

"I knew Paula Ashby as an excellent student, an outstanding athlete and as a young woman who through her leadership not only embodied but also inspired the spirit of the Milton Mustang in others," Doyle said.

The criteria of the award is that the recipient be an outstanding female or male athlete who represented Milton District High School in at least two sports in the season, have a high academic average, and be in his or her graduating year with the intention of attending college or university. If there are several student athletes who meet the criteria, the selection committee considers if the student has overcome a personal adversity, illness or injury, and if the student demonstrates talent in art, music or poetry.

Turner pushing for fairer pension splitting

Halton MP Garth Turner is pushing the federal government to end what he calls unfairness in the recently announced pension-splitting rules.

During Question Period last week in the House of Commons, Turner asked Finance Minister Jim Flaherty to "do the right thing" and allow soldiers, firefighters and other Canadians forced into early retirement by special-needs jobs to be able to split income with their spouses.

Under guidelines released October 31 by the Department of Finance, only Canadians over the age of 65 qualify for income-splitting benefits, which apply to registered pension plans, RRSPs and RRIFs. Those who qualify are able to allocate up to 50 per cent of their retirement income to a spouse or common-law partner. That income is then taxable in the spouse's hands at his or her lower marginal rate. For a couple with a household income of $40,000, it can result in a savings of $2,000.

"The move to allow pension-splitting by Canadian couples is long overdue and absolutely the right move," said Turner. "However, while the government is addressing an old tax unfairness with this move, it should not create a new one."
