Learn how to talk to your teen

Are you a parent struggling to communicate with your pre-teen or teen?

Then you may want to check out Dr. Scott Wooding's presentation Wednesday entitled 'Did That Grunt Mean Yes or No? — Communicating With Teenagers'.

The session, which will take place at Hugh Foster Hall from 7 to 9 p.m., will teach parents how to develop a foolproof communication system that will result in a closer relationship with their teens.

Tickets cost $5 and can be purchased at the Ontario Early Years Centre, 410 Bronte St. S., and Milton Public Library, 45 Bruce St.

Dr. Wooding is Canada's leading authority on parenting today's teenagers and also a best-selling author.

His talk is being presented by the Enhancing Parenting Capacity Committee. The group includes members of the Georgetown, Milton and Acton Parent Education Networks, Halton Hills Community Support and Information and the Region's health and social and community services departments.

The presentation is funded by a grant from the National Crime Prevention Strategy Community Mobilization Program.

Hugh Foster Hall is located at 43 Brown St., beside Town Hall.

PLEASE PITCH IN: Councillor and kettle campaign volunteer Wendy Schau stands by one of the kettles at Loblaws as Salvation Army Community Outreach Co-ordinator Rachel Sheils (background) looks on. Sally Ann still needs volunteers to man the kettles over the holiday season, with shifts now underway and lasting until December 23. Those interested in helping out can call (905) 875-1022 to sign up or for more information.
