FEATURED PLAYER OF THE WEEK

ALLEN PETRETIC JERSEY #79

Birthday: Aug. 26, 1988
Hometown: Brampton, ON Position: Forward
Height: 6' - 1"
Weight: 180 lbs

A junior player's rookie season can often be quite trying, but Allen Petretic looks back on his with great fondness.

"The highlight for me was probably just how we bonded as a team," recalled the 18-year-old, of his time with the Northern Conference's Collingwood Blues. "Four of us lived above this hair salon and we were the closest guys on the team. We went everywhere and did everything together."

Now much closer to his hometown of Brampton, Petretic is feeling fairly positive about his sophomore campaign as well. After all, he's already surpassed last year's point total, and also made key strides in his defensive game.

But he knows full well that there's still improvement to be made toward his goal of landing a scholarship.

"I feel I've got to get more consistent and bring my physical game up," he remarked.

Although part of a Croatian family in which — like many — soccer is the sport of choice, the IceHawks winger split his time between hockey and baseball until very recently, when he opted to focus solely on his on-ice pursuits.

A former OMHA finalist with his Brampton Battalion midget team, Petretic had heard last year just how much more of a microscope Western Conference teams were under compared to their Provincial Jr. A counterparts.

He's quickly learning just how true that is.

"They say that if you're good enough scouts will go anywhere, but there seems to be more attention here," he said. "In a way that's good if you want to get noticed, but there's also a lot more pressure in the West. Up North only the diehard hockey fans really care, but here everyone wants to know how their team and players are doing."
