Building a vision for Halton's economy

by Regional Chair Gary Carr

In 2006, Halton Region undertook a Comprehensive Economic Development Study. This study examined fundamental competitiveness issues and looked at how we can create policies and strategies to sustain a prosperous and balanced economy. It also examined a wide range of tools to achieve the economic development objectives needed to support a competitive business environment here in Halton. The objective of the study was to develop a strategy that would lead Halton Region's economic development activities and service priorities for the next decade and beyond. The outcome of the study, the Comprehensive Economic Development Strategy, was endorsed by Halton Regional Council in October 2006.

The Strategy is built on a vision for economic development in Halton: Halton will be a Region with an innovative and diverse economy built on the basis of its choice competitive location, vibrant skilled workforce, high quality infrastructure and positive business environment where skilled workers live and work. The Comprehensive Economic Development Strategy will provide the framework to help us meet this vision for the future.

Consulting with the Community

Public consultation was crucial to the development of the Strategy. Thanks to extensive consultation with stakeholders in Halton including residents, the business community, the development industry, senior levels of government, industry sector associations, and education and non-profit organizations, the Region has developed a strategy to sustain Halton's vision for a strong and vibrant future. Public information and economic roundtable sessions were held to discuss the Comprehensive Economic Development Study and to update the community on the progress of the study.

The Strategy is organized into five themes:

- Halton – A Location of Choice for Business
- Competitive Business Environment
- Supporting Entrepreneurialism and Skills Development
- Strategic Partnerships to Support Business
- Planning for Economic Growth and Prosperity

Each theme identifies specific goals, and those goals are supported by actions to help the Region reach those goals.

Throughout 2007, Halton Region will undertake the actions arising out of the Strategy. Implementation of some of the actions has already begun, and the remainder of the work will be directed by a working group made up of Regional staff.

Supporting Entrepreneurialism and Skills Development

Economic growth in small and medium-sized businesses is driven by knowledge, skills, innovation and entrepreneurship. To help foster this growth, one of the key themes of the Comprehensive Economic Development Strategy is Supporting Entrepreneurialism and Skills Development. This theme focuses on new approaches to producing, preparing, retaining and attracting a labour force with the right skills to succeed in the knowledge economy. This theme also looks at new entrepreneurs and start-up companies, which form a core element of the services provided by the Business Development Division.

The two goals driving this theme are to:

- Encourage new entrepreneurs, start-up and growing businesses in Halton; and
- Provide support to business in skills development.

Actions that will help us meet these goals include enhancing services offered by Halton's Business Development Centre; promoting and supporting youth entrepreneurship programs; and supporting the development and delivery of industry-based training initiatives like co-op and apprenticeship programs in Halton. A knowledge economy needs higher skill levels to stay competitive, so these actions will help cultivate a well-trained workforce to support existing businesses and new investments.
