$50G earmarked for program

health department's 2007 budget by $50,000 to develop a community-wide air quality modeling initiative that can assess air quality and forecast the impact of new emission sources before they're even built, such as a new factory or highway expansion.

The modeling program will use sophisticated computer models to estimate the concentration of different air pollutants across the community and examine emission sources separately.

In addition to approving funds for the modeling program, regional council endorsed having the Region:

- Examine portable monitoring equipment and/or resources that could be used to assess air quality in micro-environments such as traffic corridors
- Examine the policy instruments that might be used to support the development of 'complete communities' that reduce the reliance on vehicles, in turn reducing emissions of air pollutants and greenhouse gases across Halton

• Develop and implement a health promotion program that educates the public about the link between air quality, human health, climate change and the environment and about actions that can be taken to improve air quality and/or slow down climate change.

Council also approved — in principle — the commissioning of stationary air quality monitors, subject to a report back from staff on May 24.

Hey there kids, is your teacher tops?

Once again, the Champion is looking for teachers who go above and beyond the call of duty.

Every month, the Champion features a Teacher of the Month, who's chosen from among nomination letters sent by students and parents.

Due to the fire at the office of the Champion, the nomination letters on file were ruined. The Champion is asking those who sent a letter since the start of this school year to re-send it.

We're also encouraging parents and students who haven't yet submitted anything to do so.

Simply tell us why you think your teacher deserves to be recognized, and make sure you include your contact information.

The contest is open to all teachers from preschool to grade 12 in the public and Catholic school systems, as well as Milton's private schools.

In addition to a feature on the winning teacher in the Champion, his or her class will receive a pizza party.

Send nominations by e-mail to miltone@haltonsearch.com. The deadline for April's recipient is March 26.
