New father-friendly website slowly gaining an audience

All things dad related discussed on site

By Stephanie Thiessen

First it was the moms in Milton who found themselves with an Internet forum. Now, dads have a portal all their own to do everything from share home improvement tips to ask questions about their cars.

A couple of months ago, local resident Sandy Gillespie decided it was time to create a dad-focused version of her wildly popular website www.haltonmoms.com, which she created a few years ago. So www.miltondads.com was born.

So far, it's getting off the ground slowly but surely, with about 100 members who can read others' messages on a variety of topics and post messages of their own. Topics include do-it-yourself projects, sports, vehicles and parenting, Gillespie said.

Gillespie's husband, John Vitellaro, is the site's moderator.

Message boards are a great way to "get a lot of information from a lot of people," Gillespie said.

To find out all the people you're chatting with on-line live nearby is a bonus, she said, adding that she met her neighbour two doors down over the Halton Moms site, not knowing how close they lived.

"It's an ice breaker for sure," she said. "You feel out who you have a kinship with and go from there."

The Halton Moms site now has 1,500 members and is constantly growing. Gillespie said moms enjoy being able to find people they click with on-line and then get together with each other.

Although the site is for moms across Halton, discussion boards are broken down into communities, and the Milton hub has become the busiest, she said.

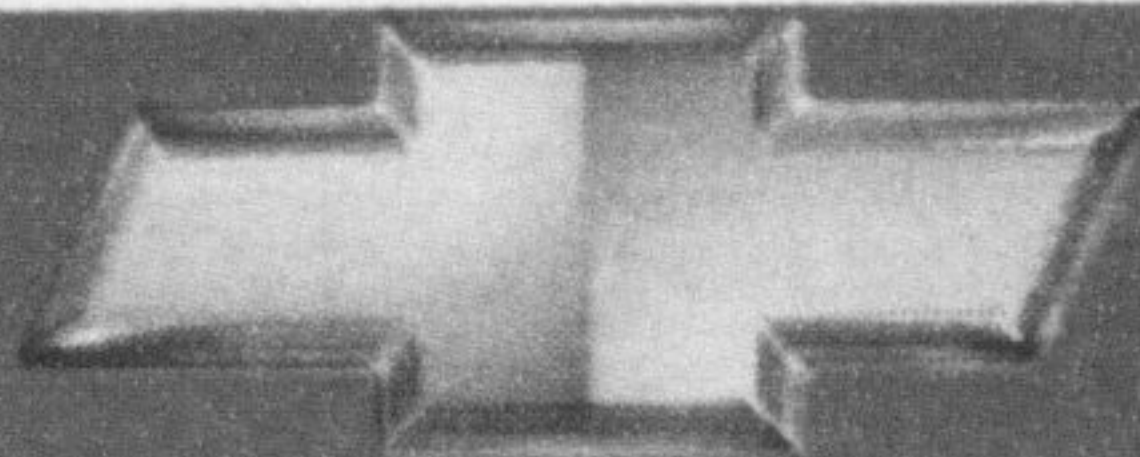

The group has evolved into a support network, with women sharing with and encouraging each other, and also welcoming new residents to town who log onto the site.

It was some of these moms who expressed a desire to see a similar site for their husbands, Gillespie added.
