Flush with the environment in mind

(NC)—The environment has become an increasingly important concern to millions of Canadians. People are looking for ways to improve their lives and live more in harmony with Mother Nature. Recycling paper and plastic is commonplace, and the introduction of new technologies has made it easier to make a difference.

Conserving electricity by turning off lights, regulating heating and air conditioning and riding a bicycle in the summer are some of the ways Canadians are taking steps to be better environmental citizens. Cutting back on water usage is another easy way homeowners can do their part to help protect the environment, and protect their wallet.

"Homeowners are demanding more products and technologies that enhance their environmental citizenship without taking away from design or performance," said Donna Church, a Sterling spokesperson. "Simply updating your old toilet to one with water conservation features is a great way to make a positive change in your home."

Replacing your toilet with a water-conserving dual flush model means you can save over 6,000 gallons of water per year. Sterling, a Kohler brand, offers homeowners three different styles of dual-force toilets that will suit any bathroom design. The Stanton, Sterling's newest edition to their dual-force technology toilets, meets the consumer demand for design and performance.

Operated by a user-friendly two-button actuator integrated into the tank lid, the user can flush either 1.6 gallons of what the industry politely refers to as bulk waste or half that amount - 0.8 gallons for light waste.

The minimalist design of the Stanton toilet enables it to blend seamlessly with any existing design aesthetic in your bathroom. Available in white, almond or biscuit, the Stanton allows homeowners to conserve water in style and put their money back where it belongs - in their pocket.
