

Carol McDonald

Milton resident Carol McDonald has utilized her leadership and forward vision to help local businesswomen further develop their business skills. One of the ways she's done this is by co-organizing the Milton Businesswomen's Breakfast Group, which meets monthly. She and her husband, Bob, are co-founders of McMarketing Inc., a marketing, public relations and advertising agency. For the past 14 years, she has chaired the government relations committee with the Milton Chamber of Commerce and has been heavily involved with the Chamber's annual fundraising golf tournament. McDonald is a founding member of the Milton District Hospital Physician Recruitment Committee and sits on numerous other committees.

Lianne Krane

Lianne Krane can often be found serving customers at the several Subway stores she owns in Milton. Through the restaurants, Krane donates food to causes including various clean-up days and the Terry Fox Run. She balances business with her family, and was president of the Sam Sherratt Parent Council for a year.

Krane is also known for her work with the Milton Junior Chamber (the Jaycees), of which she was president in 2000 and 2001. In 2000, Krane was nominated for the Milton Chamber of Commerce's Business Woman of the Year award. She loves to garden, and is currently president of the Milton and District Horticultural Society.

Martha Gleeson

Milton resident Martha Gleeson was a driving force behind the formation of the Monarch Basketball League, a non-profit organization for youths in Milton. She's heavily involved in the Catholic community; she's a long-time member of the Our Lady of Victory Church choir, as well as volunteering on the Catholic Women's League, among other involvements. She was also chair and director of the Marian Project, a seniors' condominium and residence development. And last year, Gleeson became chair of the leadership committee of Milton District Hospital's CT Scanner Campaign. Business-wise, Gleeson is the founder and co-owner of a company that distributes and manufactures key control systems to car dealerships.

Caroline Harris

Caroline Harris is a Georgetown resident who owns Pathway to Wellness, a facility that offers individual and group programs based on her clients' needs. She's a personal trainer, certified nutrition and wellness consultant, yoga and pilates instructor and practitioner of traditional Chinese medicine. She contributes to health magazines and speaks at various functions and to students at local schools. She also organized a group for new moms at the local Salvation Army, and participates in numerous charity events such as the Big Bike Race for the Heart and Stroke Foundation. Caroline Harris was a former Mrs. Toronto and runner up for Mrs. Canada, and is active with the Halton Hills Women in Business group.

Jane Diamanti

Jane Diamanti is the director of library services with the Halton Hills Public Library, and served as chair of the Halton Libraries Network (Halinet) for two years. The quality of her work can be seen in such projects as the recently completed Strategic Plan for Halton Hills Public Library. One of Diamanti's major endeavours has been the renovation and expansion of the Georgetown branch of the Halton Hills Library, which she spearheaded. She's a volunteer board member of Literacy North Halton (LNH), thereby bringing her love of reading to the community. Diamanti is also an avid supporter of LNH's annual spelling bee, as well as the Battle of the Books contest for children.
