

Website provides resources, not answers

"A couple of us on the coalition have had family members take their lives and in hindsight we know what we would have done but at this point all we can do is say, 'We should have done this, we should have done that,'" she said.

"The best thing to do with someone who is feeling suicidal or says, 'I feel like killing myself,' is to say to them, 'Do you have a plan,' and talk to them about it and draw them out. This is information that we have on this website."

While the website provides resources for people dealing with issues related to suicide Mercer admits it is not equipped to handle people who are actively thinking about taking their own lives.

The home page of the website actually has a disclaimer noting where people in such desperate situations can get a much quicker response.

"If you or anyone you know is feeling suicidal, call 911."
