

Haydar tops AHL post-season scoring

Finishes first despite not reaching finals

The Chicago Wolves may not have ended up tops in the American Hockey League (AHL) this spring, but their star Miltonian did.

Darren Haydar

In what can only be described as bitersweet consolation — after his Atlanta Thrashers farm team was ousted in a five-game semifinal by the eventual champion Hamilton Bulldogs — Darren Haydar wound up first in the post-season scoring race.

Despite not reaching the championship, he topped all playoff producers with 10 goals and 14 assists in 15 games. Hamilton's Corey Locke looked poised to eclipse him, but was held off the score-sheet in last week's final two victories over the Hershey Bears to finish two points back.

Haydar won both the regular season and playoff scoring races, with a combined 146 points (more than any other player in North American pro hockey), and has now finished first in post-season scoring three times in his five-year AHL career.

Enjoying a 1.65 points-per-game average through 2006/07, the 27-year-old right winger heads into the second year of the two-year contract with Atlanta this fall — during which he's guaranteed to make the NHL minimum (between $450,000 and $475,000) regardless of where he ends up.

Because he's now past the five-year mark in his career, he'll have to clear waivers if sent down to the Wolves again.
