Great artistic skill not required

 the cenotaph in Victoria Park and the Waldie Blacksmith Shop — which she hopes others from the community, perhaps those less confident in their art abilities, will complete.

This project has been truly inspirational, Cuttle said, particularly since the community has taken it to heart. "This is one of the most positive community projects I've ever worked on." She's urging residents to continue to get involved, and said incredible artistic skills aren't required — just the ability to hold a paint brush.

Jelena Katarina Sisko, museum assistant at Halton Region Museum, is another artist who's involved. Her painting portrays P.L. Robertson, who invented the socket head screw, and his factory.

As an artist who just recently graduated from university for fine arts, Sisko said working on the project was a great way to gain some exposure as well as do something she's passionate about. It also provided an opportunity to liaise with fellow artists.

The entire painting, on which she used a mural technique, took 10 to 15 hours, Sisko said.

The project was rewarding, particularly because of the encouragement curious onlookers offered.

"Passersby were really interested," she said, adding, "It seems like the community is really enjoying (this project)."

Some panels are still available for individuals or groups who'd like to participate in the project. For more information, contact Sandra Spagnuolo at (905) 854-5624 or e-mail her at sandraspagnuolo@hotmail.com.
