

Wal-Mart shoppers being asked to support Red Cross

Local residents can now support the Canadian Red Cross simply by visiting their local Wal-Mart.

From now until September 4, shoppers will be able to make a donation at Wal-Mart's check-outs and post a Red Cross card on the wall that bears their name.

Funds raised will ensure the Red Cross is ready to respond when disaster strikes.

"This campaign is an excellent opportunity for Canadian Red Cross to profile the important work that we do in our own community while also raising awareness about how anyone can personally prepare for an emergency," said Lisa Natale, fund development coordinator for the Halton Red Cross branches.

"We're very excited to work with Wal-Mart during this annual fundraising campaign and know that Wal-Mart shoppers will get behind Canadian Red Cross."

Wal-Mart Canada also helps the Red Cross keep stockpiles of emergency supplies like blankets and hygiene kits. In addition, the company made a major cash donation that enables the Red Cross to build up its local disaster support system.

Residents unable to make a donation at Wal-Mart can support Red Cross disaster preparedness and response by giving on-line at www.redcross.ca.

Volunteer drivers are needed

Do you have a few hours each week to spare, enjoy meeting new people and want to make a difference in someone's life?

Then becoming a volunteer driver with the Canadian Red Cross might be for you.

Drivers are currently required for the Milton area and training is provided.

For more information about the volunteer position, call Jacqui Stokes at the Milton Red Cross office at (905) 875-1459, ext. 21.
