

Make your home a high tech entertainment hub this holiday season

(NC)—More and more consumers are choosing home entertainment components that have full digital connectivity, and whether it is a laptop, television, DVD player, cable box or satellite receiver, they want all components to sync for the ultimate in home theatre entertainment.

ern-day slide-show on your high definition large screen television. You can use your Regza Link control to instantly and easily play back music, digital photographs and video stored on your laptop computer.

• Want your friends and relatives to share in the enjoyment of your kids opening their presents on Christmas morning? Regza Link allows you to sync your digital recorder to your home entertainment system so you can record your family opening presents and instantly replay them once the rest of the gang arrives.

• Stock up on favourite Holiday DVDs for family screenings. REGZA Link starts the playback of the DVD and simultaneously turns on the TV while allowing users the ability to control the TV, DVD player and audio amplifier at the same time, with a single remote.

"The holidays should be about fun," says Takashima. "Why not make your technological life easier and get it working the way you want it to?"

People want home technology to be easy. They want everything to work together and, ultimately, be able to manage all components with a single remote without complicated additional programming or set up. This year, HDMI-CEC technology is offering consumers the ability to simplify their technological lives using single-wire HDMI port connections that will operate externally connected equipment just the same as if it was built in.

There is no better time than the holidays to use these additional functions to keep a house full of friends and guests entertained. According to Lindsay Takashima, Toshiba's vice president of marketing CEG, Canadians can turn their homes into entertainment hubs for friends and family this holiday season with some of the following fun and easy ideas using Toshiba's HDMI-CEC technology, called Regza Link:

- Gather the family for a mod-
