The secret space under your feet

(NC)—In the winter months, home space is often at a premium – instead of splashing out on an addition, maybe the answer to your space stress lies just beneath your feet. The basement is an easily forgotten area, but one that is ideal for storage, housing guests or as a play-room for your kids. To make the space useable and comfortable, it's worth ensuring that your basement is properly insulated.

"Insulating your basement will make the room inviting and liveable," says David Flood, insulation expert at Owens Corning. "Get the most out of your space by insulating the walls and floors of your basement to lock in warmth and save* on energy costs by preventing cold air from seeping in."

To get started, install R-14 batts of PINK™ FIBERGLAS® insulation along with INSULPINK® foam insulation to the walls of your basement for optimal comfort. Apply a polyethylene moisture barrier from the floor all the way up the walls. The next step is to build a frame using studs around the basement. To Install PINK™ FIBERGLAS® batts, place them between each stud.

In addition to adding comfort, insulating your basement is beneficial for your wallet as it can save* you money on energy costs. And the good news keeps coming since the new PINK™ FIBERGLAS® insulation made with EcoTouch™ PureFiber™ technology is made from natural materials and over 70 per cent recycled content, the highest in the industry.

Insulating your basement with PINK™ will ensure your home is energy efficient, while using sustainable products for your renovation. By enveloping your home with insulation, the heat will stay in during the winter and the cool air will remain inside during the summer.
