

Middleweight prevails again

Overcoming a slow start, local boxer Aljermaine Burnett added to his win column last weekend — earning a split decision victory over Chicago's Tracey Rollins in London.

This was part of a Canada-vs.-U.S. card that served as a fundraiser for the area's kidney clinical research unit.

Now 17-3, the 23-year-old Miltonian got the better of his more seasoned middleweight opponent — who's trained by former world light heavyweight champion Monte Griffith — through the final two rounds on the way to his latest win.

Continuing to show patience and an ability to make adjustments, the hard-hitting 165-pounder displayed a great deal of composure through the early going and got stronger as the fight progressed — eventually wearing down his American rival with numerous straight rights to the body.

"He's a good student of the sport and is really learning," said coach Dewith Fraser of Dewith's Boxing Studio in Mississauga. "Aljermaine's come a long way and this was a big win against a more seasoned fighter who's very well coached."

Burnett now turns his attention to the provincial championships at the end of October in Windsor. This will be the initial step in his qualifying bid for next fall's Commonwealth Games in India.

Correction

A sports story in last Friday's Champion contained incorrect information.

Among local BMXers, Taylor Trach in fact placed first in the 15-and-16-year-old novice girls division of the Ontario Cup Series, while left out of the original story was J.J. Kocsisan, who took first in the 13-year-old boys intermediate class.

The Champion apologizes for the errors.
