

H1N1 vaccine may not be available next week: Nosal

• from NO on page A1

Health staff administered 1,415 injections in Milton Monday, and 5,921 at all four sites in Halton.

Greeters at the clinic have been handing out papers to people advising them the clinic is only for priority groups. They include people under age 65 with chronic medical conditions, pregnant women, healthy children from six months to under five years of age, some health-care workers, people living in remote and isolated settings, and caregivers and household contacts of people in a high priority group who can't be immunized such as infants under six months of age or those who may not respond to vaccines.

Halton Region spokesperson Carleen Carroll attributed the shorter wait times in Milton to what she described as a great location.

"It's got a lot of parking, it's got good space, we've got the staffing resources that we need."

The Milton clinic is scheduled to run daily from noon to 8 p.m. until Friday but residents can check www.halton.ca or call 311 for updated information.

This is the second week Halton has been running H1N1 clinics. Last week, the Region had a clinic in both Oakville and Acton but it expanded the number to four starting Monday.

Prior to yesterday's clinics, the Region had given out 24,125 doses of H1N1 vaccine. As well, doctors, hospitals and long-term care centres in Halton have received 19,875 doses.

Halton Region's health department is hopeful it will have enough doses of the vaccine to continue this week's clinics.

However, Halton Medical Officer of Health Dr. Bob Nosal said he doesn't know if it will have vaccine for clinics next week.

Residents can call their local doctors to see if they are offering the vaccination.
