Second person charged

Guelph woman charged with assault in Olympic protest

A second person faces charges after an Olympic torchbearer from Milton was confronted by protesters in Guelph last month.

Police have charged a 20-year-old Guelph woman with assault.

The accused is due in court next month.

The charge follows an incident December 28 in which torchbearer Cortney Hansen, 28, fell to the ground after protesters became entangled with the security detail for the Olympic flame.

Police had previously laid an assault charge against a 19-year-old Kitchener woman, who also has a court date next month.

The incident prompted organizers to call on protesters to keep their demonstrations peaceful.

Court case remanded until Mon.

For the third time in just over a month, the case of a Milton man who's facing various child pornography charges has been remanded.

Lower Base Line resident John McDowell, 47, will make his next appearance this Monday at Superior Court of Justice in Milton.

The date was set at his most recent court appearance Monday afternoon.

McDowell — who remains in custody — stood calmly, wearing blue jeans and a navy sweatshirt, while his lawyer, the crown attorney and Judge Bruce Durno worked out his return date.

McDowell has been charged with possession of child pornography, accessing child pornography and making available child pornography.
