

Growth will continue to pay for itself, vows acclaimed Carr

"I'm a big believer in the strategic plan driving everything we do," said Carr. "Then at budget time, we put the budget into those things deemed as priority items. So the next six weeks is about listening to people and learning the issues."

He said during the next four years, the Region will continue to focus on keeping taxes low, investing more in infrastructure and working on master plans for transportation, water and wastewater.

Asked if he expects the population boom to continue through his next term, Carr said it depends on the economy.

"We're still fortunate that businesses are coming to Halton; we did well through the recession."

He attributes Halton's continued growth to low taxes. A Regional budget with a zero per cent tax increase was approved in 2010 and Halton's tax increase was 2.2 per cent in 2009, and 1.3 per cent in 2008. In June, a report from Regional staff suggested taxes could rise by 3.1 per cent in 2011.

He also said the Region's reputation as one of the safest communities in Canada attracts new residents.

"We want to continue with that and we need to give police services the tools to get the job done."

Regardless of Halton's growth rate, Carr maintained that the growth will continue to pay for itself. "We're going to make any new development be paid for by the developers, not by the existing tax payers."

With experience at all levels of government, Carr said he feels like he's contributing the most at the regional level.

"At the federal and provincial level, I've often said you're nothing more than a marketing person. The decisions get made and (party leaders) just send their MPs and MPPs to go out and champion whatever they've decided," he said. "At the regional level, you're managing more, you're more involved.

"The other thing I like is that you really have to work with people, there isn't the party lines," he continued. "In municipal politics everyone is free. If I want to get something through I have to convince my colleagues, because I'm only one vote."
