

Bonnie Geddes. A resident of Guelph, Bonnie feels her summer job at Maplehurst Correctional Centre will assist her with her planned career as a legal secretary.

Summer considered super training

By Linda Kirby
Bonnie Geddes is happy with a summer job that some people might think twice about accepting.

The 21-year-old Guelph college student is responsible for a number of office duties at Maplehurst Correctional Centre.

But unlike most secretaries, she works directly with inmates in the school area of the medium-security institution.

In addition to her office tasks, she will spend one period a week assisting an English professor with teaching inmates how to read and write.

If the idea of working closely with inmates bothers some, it doesn't Bonnie Geddes.

"I like it," she said, adding the job means something different every day.

Although there are the occasional whistles directed at the attractive summer student from inmates, that does not worry her, she said.

A second year student at Centennial College, Miss Geddes views the summer position as an excellent background for a planned career as a legal secretary.

Summer in Family Court

By Linda Kirby
Seventeen-year-old Sandy Hewitt is spending her second summer in the Family Division offices of Milton Provincial Court House as an Experience '81 student.

The grade 13 Georgetown District High School student said she enjoyed her work at the Steeles Ave. complex last summer sufficiently to apply again for a job.

She is kept busy digging up files for the daily court docket, looking after maintenance accounts, typing correspondence, bookkeeping and general office duties.

As well, she assists court administrator Judy Currye.

Miss Hewitt hopes to pursue a career in the courts, but is unsure of the exact position.

"I do want to work in the courts," she said.

"I enjoy meeting with people and dealing with them," she added.

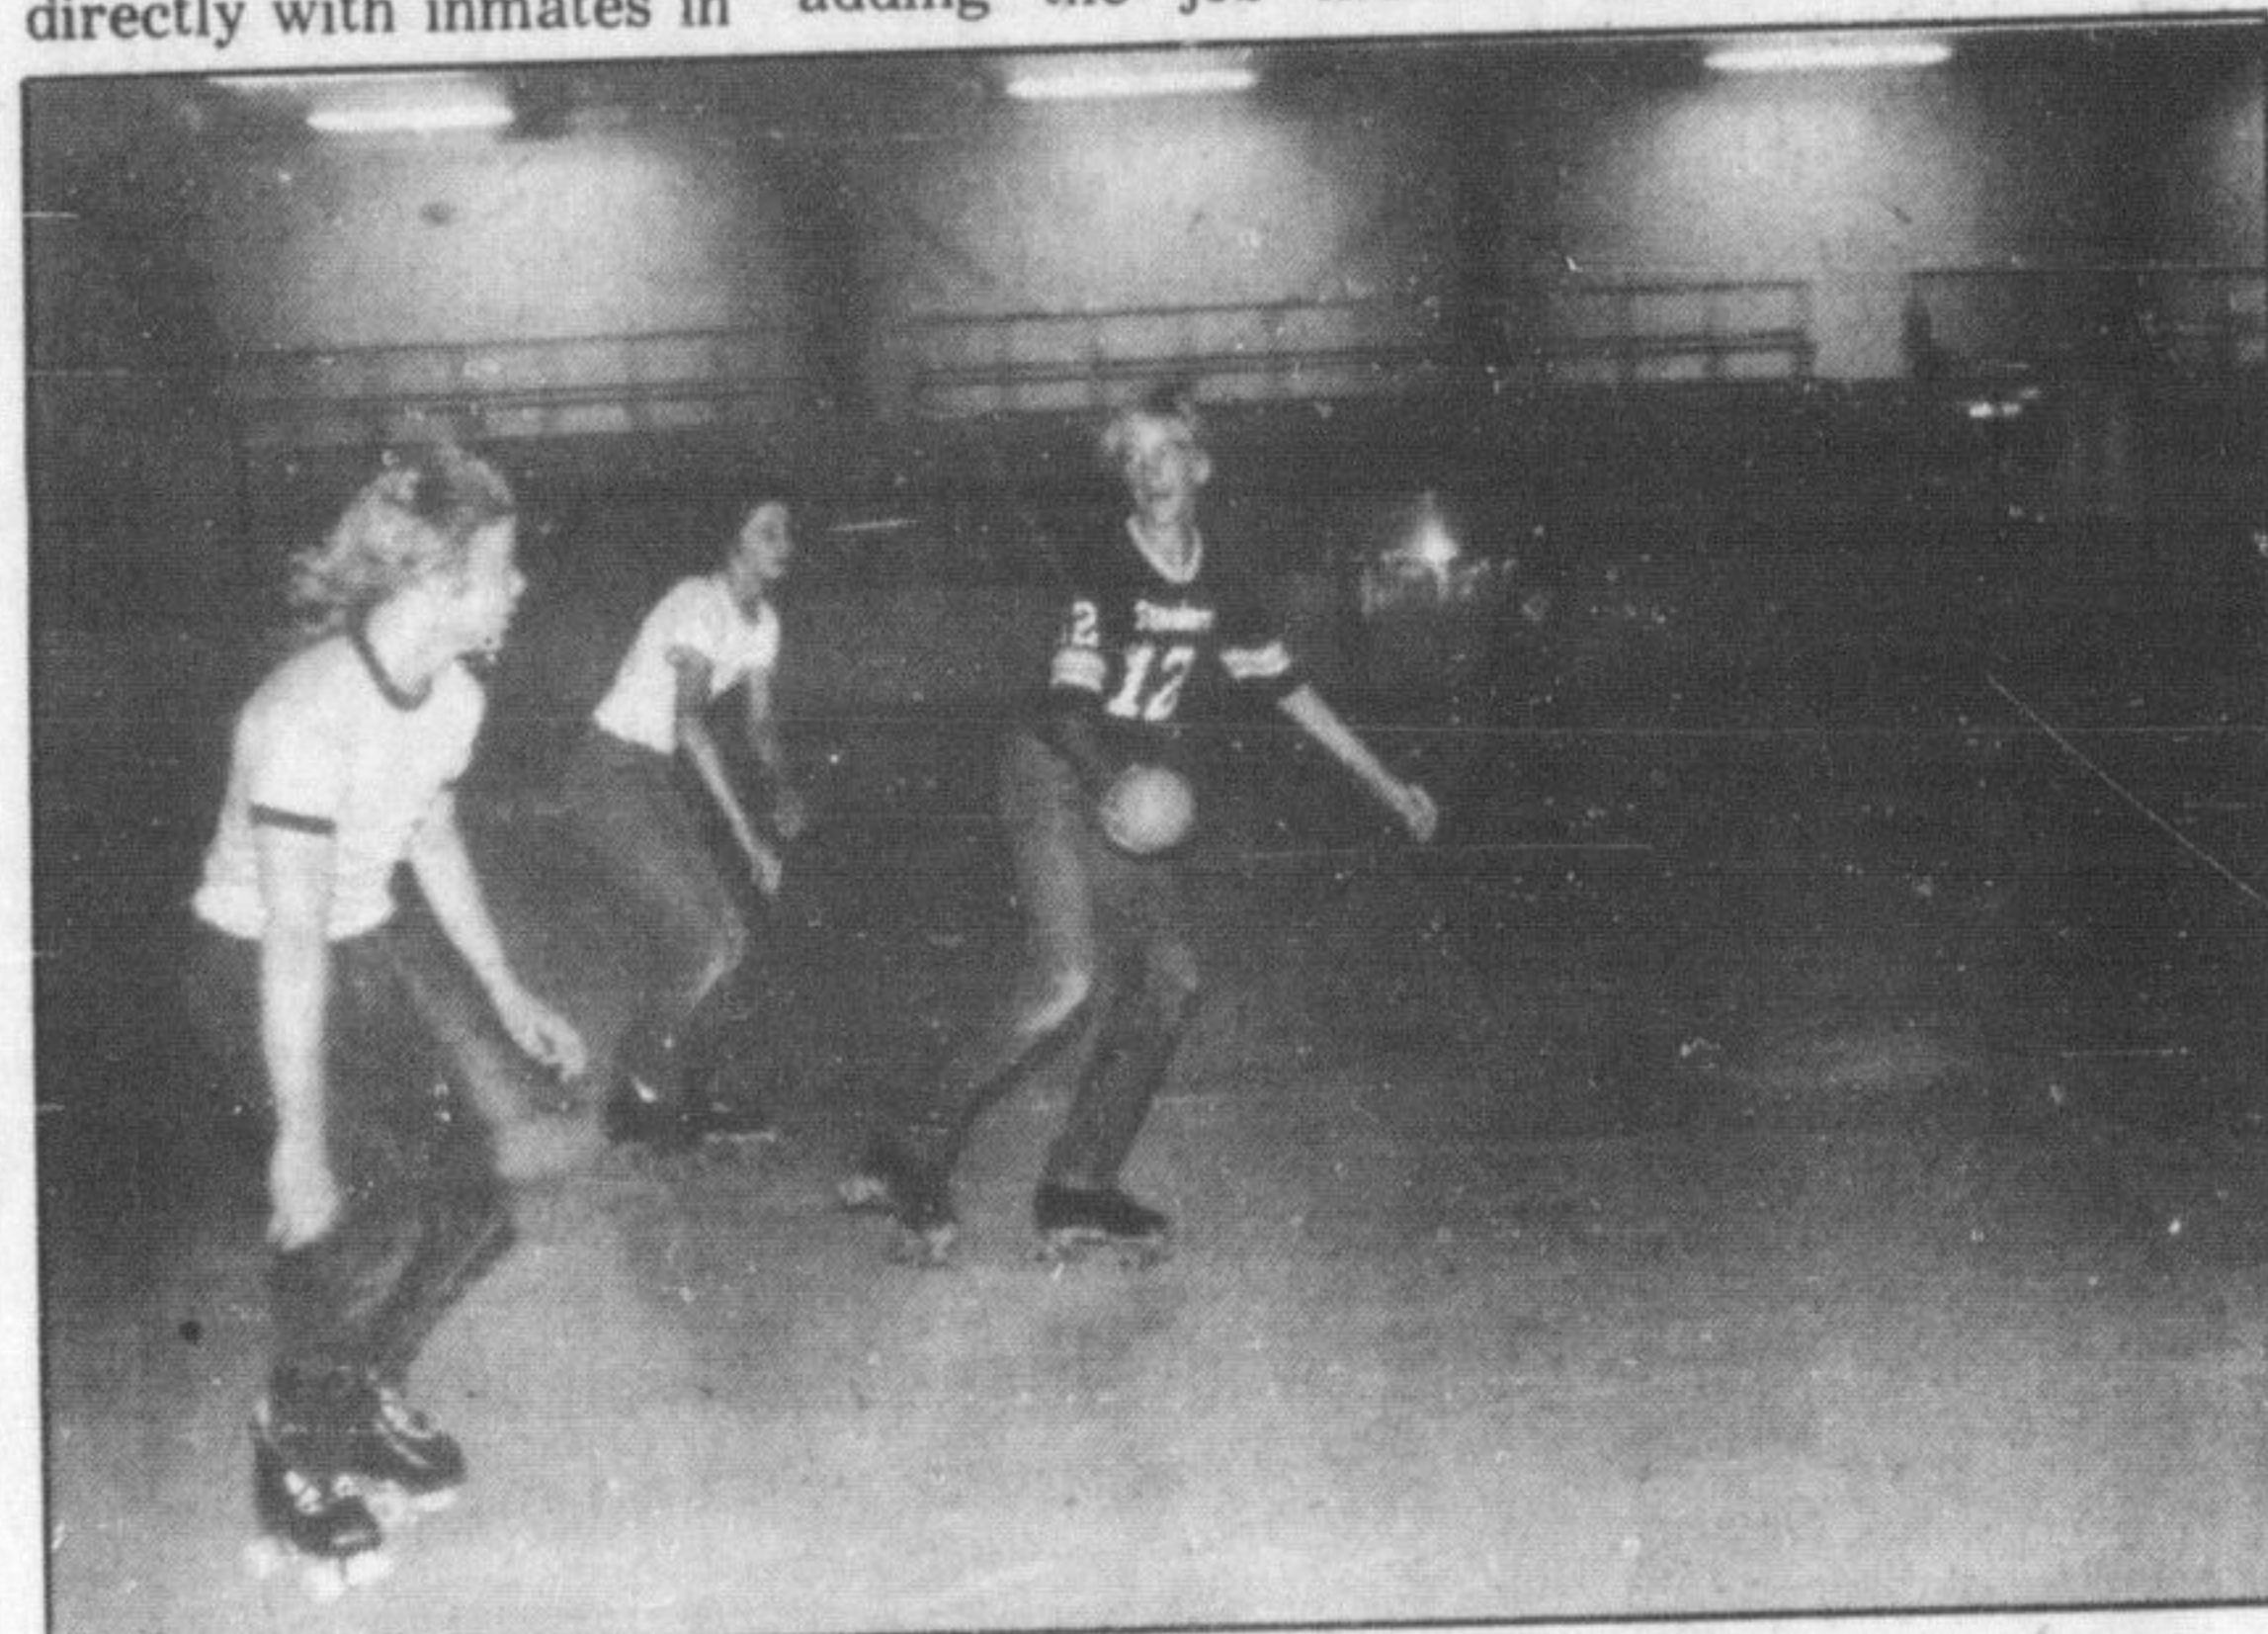

Miss Hewitt has one semester left at school and then plans to attend college.

Sandy Hewitt. This 17-year-old Georgetown student enjoyed her job with the Milton Provincial Court House so much last summer, she returned again this year.

Council

There will be no Milton Council Briefs this week. The council does not hold its next regular meeting until July 27. At that meeting the bylaw to rezone Site F will be discussed and The Champion will carry a complete report in the July 29 edition.

Rolling through summer. These young people are keeping themselves busy this summer by visiting Milton Parks and Recreation Drop-in Centre which is the centre for activity geared to 13 to 18-year-olds. Roller skating each Monday afternoon at Milton Sports Centre is just one of the ways co-ordinator Paul Knauer plans to keep drop-in participants entertained.

Optimist drop-in

Local teenagers should not be at a loss for things to do this summer with the Milton Parks and Recreation Drop-in Centre in full operation. Co-ordinator Paul Knauer, 24, is a natural for the job of running this program. He is a secondary school teacher in Scarborough and took on this summer job to get to know children in a recreational setting.

Born in New Guinea, Paul is living with his parents in Moffat for the summer.

He received his post-secondary education at the University of Western Ontario and now teaches science and biology at Scarborough Christian School.

The Drop-in Centre located at Milton Optimist Centre offers recreation for teenagers through organized sports activities, outings and equipment such as pinball machine, ping pong table and many board games.

Weekly rollerskating, trips to Kelso and the use of Martin St. School gymnasium are some of the planned activities.

A structured program is not what the drop-in is all about however; it should be considered a place to go with friends or to meet new ones in a relaxed atmosphere.

There is no charge for participating but excursions which require a fee must be paid for by participants for the most part. The summer drop-in runs until August 28 and is open weekdays including most evenings.
