

Boutique owners address society

Gabrielle and Steve Jarvie, of Gabrielle's Flower Boutique in the Laurier Avenue Mall, were the speakers at the Milton and District Horticultural Society's November 16, 1981 meeting.

tion to show the audience how they are done and what materials are used. In addition, they brought a large selection of Christmas arrangements to give other ideas and to show what containers and accessories could be used.

The door hanging of fresh pine, bells, cones and red bows, made use of materials likely to be on hand at home or that could be collected from the countryside. Made now and kept away from high heat indoors, the swag would keep throughout the holiday season.

The centrepiece used artificial pine and candles in holders so that it could be reused for many Christmases.

Gabrielle and Steve described techniques of preparing containers with oasis or Styrofoam, the number and spacing of accessories, such as candles, and how to tie bows. For the corsage, each flower, ball, cone, bell, leaf and bow was individually wired and wrapped.

Other ideas presented at the meeting were candy Christmas trees, decorated Christmas beads, miniature sleighs with presents, carts, wheelbarrows, and baskets.

Lois Parker introduced the speakers, who were thanked by Dean Parrott. Following the demonstration, the Jarvies generously offered their centrepiece and corsage for draw prizes for two lucky winners.

Also at the meeting, Lois Parker reported on a successful bus trip to the Royal Agricultural Winter Fair, and proposed a trip to the Flower Growers' auction.

Ruth Lockie and Ed Parsons were appointed by the executive to the nominating committee, with Grace May appointed at the meeting.

Grace May did an excellent job of judging the November Flower show, and the winners were:

Class 1, We Need a Little Christmas Now: Dorothy Gould, Jean Robertson. Class 2, Let Me Be the First to Wish You Merry Christmas This Year: Jean Robertson, Lois Parker, Dorothy Gould. Class 3, Candles in the Window: Margaret and Cliff Wrigglesworth, Jean Robertson. Class 4, a handmade tree ornament: Jean Robertson, Nellie Wood, Dorothy Gould. Class 5, Visions of Sugar Plums: Jean Robertson, Gladys Clement, Dorothy Gould. Class 6, a red or white flowering houseplant: Milton Junior Horticultural Society, Margaret Wrigglesworth. Class 7, a berried branch: Margaret Wrigglesworth.

Lunch was served by Nellie Wood and Mrs. Charles Wilson.

Tim and Juliana Smelko, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gus Smelko of Milton and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Severino Marchesich of Milton, were married Sept. 26, 1981 at Holy Rosary Church in Milton. The couple went on a Caribbean cruise on their honeymoon and are now residing in Milton.

Holy Rosary bazaar best one to date

On Saturday, Nov. 21, 1981, the doors to Holy Rosary School Gym opened at noon to begin the parish Christmas Bazaar that proved to be the best to date.

The gym was transformed into a Christmas wonderland with an old fashioned tea room on the stage. Waitresses wore long gingham skirts and matching hats. The tea tables featured handmade centre pieces.

Surrounding the gym walls were the various booths. Many a Christmas list was filled from the delicate articles on the knitting, crocheting and sewing centres.

The crafts booth was the ideal place for door decorations along with the endless trimmings for the tree and inside the home.

There was also a bake table, white elephant sale, a penny sale, silent auction and turkey roll and a raffle.

For the young set there was a fish pond, hot dog stand and a pop canteen. Free movies were also shown in the kindergarten room.

Although the event was organized and sponsored by the Catholic Womens' League, the success was mainly due to the co-operation of the entire parish.

Winners of the three raffle prizes included: Sandra Shepherd of Milton, winner of a pine blanket box, P. Gignac from Scarborough, a mantel clock and Joyce Haslam from Milton, an afghan cover.

Between the Willows

Ode to a molar

by Don Byers

There comes a time in every man's life when the face staring back at him from the bathroom mirror bears little resemblance to the youngish person he still thinks he is.

It seems to happen all at once: "Gad! I've got jowls. Me!"

Of course, it doesn't come that fast. We get older by degrees. Oh yes. I said older, not necessarily wiser.

I became aware of my vulnerability to the evolutionary process when I found myself playing trombone with my newspaper. My eyes refused to focus on all that tiny type.

"It's reading glasses for you from now on," said the eye specialist.

That was some years ago. Now, my specs are an integral part of daily living. I wouldn't be lost without them. I would be uncomfortable. Never was good on the trombone.

Shortly thereafter, I began to notice some surprising things going on around me. Society symbols suddenly became incredibly young: doctors, lawyers, dentists, men-of-the-cloth, school teachers, policemen, firemen, to name a few.

Things got heavier, too. The huge logs I used to haul out of the woods on one shoulder increased in weight, it seemed, overnight. Much more huffing and puffing to gain the same results.

I discovered, too, that the driveway had become steeper. Oh yes, and the path that leads up through the trees to the base of the cliff. Just when I had mastered the art of avoiding those sneaky roots that would leap out to snag my sneakers, a new, more treacherous breed emerged.

Winter, now waiting in the wings, is bound to be more bitter. That's the way it goes.

Mind you, there are consolations. I am no longer on the short list or, for that matter, the long list of prospects for life insurance agents.

The voracious record industry, fortunately, doesn't know I exist. I can watch TV commercials with impunity. They are directed (or misdirected) at a much younger audience.

"Come on, Don. Who do you think you're putting on. Men have it a lot easier growing older than we women do."

"And what, madam, do you mean by that..."

"Don't be condescending with me, you whippersnapper. Gad! That dates both of us."

"Hear me out, turkey. When a man gets grey hair people say he looks distinguished. He's proffered statesman status even if he's a slob."

"So..."

"When a woman gets grey hair they just say she's old."

"That's your statement, madam, not mine. And you happen to be wrong."

"I had a feeling you'd say that."

"O.K. Do you consider President Reagan a statesman..."

"I surely hope so."

"Then tell me. Why does he dye his hair..."

"Because that's the way Nancy likes it."

"Madam..."

"Yes..."

"You win."

Club 88 potluck a real success

Milton Senior Citizens Club 88 held a potluck luncheon in the Legion Hall Nov. 11, 1981.

About 65 people attended. After the lunch, Barbara Hancock showed slides of Florida, New York, 1,000 Islands and the Wheeler Inn in Chatham, Ont. where there are seven acres of recreational facilities under one roof. Seniors use these recreational facilities.

Club 88 held their fourth bazaar in the Legion Hall, on November 14, 1981 where a raffle draw was made.

First prize, a quilt drawn by Mrs. Pearl Maxwell, went to Mrs. Jean Strachan, 789 Cabot Trail (number 4926). Second prize was drawn by Mrs. Mae Keegan, a Mexican afghan which she made, which went to Fred Edwards of 101 Millside Dr. (number 1476).

The third prize, place mats, was drawn by Mrs. Ellen Reid and won by Mrs. Evelyn Galbraith, 111 Ontario St. N. (number 5203).

The senior citizens Bluebird choir sang at Halton Centennial Manor on Nov. 16, 1981 on the invitation of the Campbellville Women's Institute. All seniors and over-60s are made very welcome at the club.

The next potluck luncheon is scheduled for Dec. 9, 1981 and will be in the form of a Christmas party.
