Clay works exhibit at Milton Library

When students at Trillium School were asked to create with clay, the results of their self-expression promoted an art exhibition at Milton Public Library from now until December 3.

The clay works evolved from a three-week session with professional potter Agnes Olive of Terra Cotta a three-week session with professional potter Agnes Olive of Terra Cotta, who was recently accepted as a member of the American Institute of Art Therapists.

"The project was set up to create individual expression—which is important for the students," explains the artist.

The first phase of the project began in the spring with the students divided into small groups. They were asked to mold balls of clay into assigned shapes during a 30-second time limit. Agnes Olive suggested the minimal time frame left no room for students to censor their initial thoughts or experience apprehension.

Everything from a giant hamburger to personalized mugs and a downhill skier will be included in the display. The products of the project helped reinforce that each of the students is a unique and creative person, according to Agnes Olive.

Male mom awaits appeal decision

Single parenting can be difficult at best but, for male mother Barry Bryant, being reminded of his situation only serves to depress him.

His appeal for general welfare assistance was turned down as was an application for mother's allowance, a decision he appealed in October, 1981 and is still awaiting a decision.

Although he is capable and willing to work, he must stay home to care for his two-year-old son Kristoffer, who is too young for a day care setting. He claims he would only require financial assistance until his son was ready to enter a day care facility.

Society taking orders for book

The Campbellville Historical Society is now taking orders for its perspective about the area, entitled The History Of South Nassagaweya.

This publication, available in early 1982, was written by members of the society. Although a price for the book has yet to be confirmed, the society is offering Christmas gift certificates to those who would like to have the book.

To receive your gift certificate, write to June Andrews, Box 44, Campbellville, Ont.

Gabriel given five-year pin for service

Ann Gabriel, housing manager for Halton Housing Authority, was one of 10 authority staff members who recently received five-year pins for their service.

Ms. Gabriel, a resident of Milton, received her pin from fellow Miltonian Jack McGeachie, vice-chairman of the authority. Also presenting pins were Dolly Moulden of Georgetown, Olive O'Connell of Burlington and Duncan Sinclair of Oakville.

"The pins, which are presented after each five-year term of service, were designed to recognize the value of long-term service to the housing authority," says Mr. McGeachie.

"Appreciation of our efforts provides a great incentive for us," says Ms. Gabriel.

The 31 staff members of the housing authority carry out the management of 1,065 family and senior citizen rent geared to income units. The 16 projects are located in Halton Hills, Milton, Oakville and Burlington.

Block Parents hold Mall sign exchange

Local Block Parents will take advantage of crowds of Christmas shoppers for a public awareness and sign exchange program at Milton Mall.

Worn and faded Block Parent signs can be exchanged Dec. 12, 1981 for new signs but, if old signs aren't returned, there can be no exchange.

The mall display will offer plenty of information about the organization and those interested in becoming Block Parents will be encouraged.

There will be Block Parents manning the booth to answer questions.

A similar program was undertaken by the organization in the spring but the upcoming mall display is expected to be even more successful than the last due to the season, according to Block Parent Tessie Smith.
